The Brain's Depths
A "Complex" Handicap
What Is the Atom?

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

LINDBERGH writes with marvelous ease and in simple, natural style, and actually writes as he flies.

"These flats were actually covered with thousands of pelicans and other water birds. Here and there a grass hut appeared and there were numerous dugouts with small sails, sometimes several miles out in the ocean.

"I flew low over some of the rivers I passed and could see dozens of alligators sunning themselves along the banks. Some of them must have been more than 15 feet in length.

"Now and then a miniature river appears, apparently from nowhere, and dashes out over a precipice to fall in a curtain of mist and disappear again in the jungle several hundred feet below."

Thus a man flying through the air, and, as he says, "slowing down to 90 miles an hour," studies the earth below, seeing in fine weather 10,000 square miles at a glance. That means only 50 miles in each direction—100x100—10,000.

What would Livingstone and other old travelers, including Moses on his trip, think of that?

NEW YORK'S neurological institute wants to know why men's brains develop differently and what chance there is of getting "full use of the brain."

The brain of man, which is the intelligence of the earth, is strangely like the earth itself.

We use a thin layer of the earth, the fertile soil, the mines and the oil a little way down. We leave unused unlimited sources of energy deep down in the earth.

IN HIS brain man uses a thin strip on top called the "cortex," a sort of "bark," with convolutions more or less deep.

The real body of the brain, cold, gray matter, remains unused. It will take millions of years perhaps to develop that deep brain, drive those convolutions all the way down, and use the whole brain. There is more wealth unused in the human brain than in this big earth, 8,000 miles through.

THE United States pays more toward the expenses of the League of Nations than any other country except Great Britain—although we are not in the League. That's unusual. We paid more than any other nation for that big war—about $59,000,000 a day while we were in it, and we lent the allied fighters ten thousand millions of dollars—yet it wasn't our war.

We are getting along nicely in Havana, our deliberations and arrangements with the Latin powers south of us going smoothly.

Our men in this conference have an advantage that our statesmen didn't have at the famous Washington conference, when we agreed to scrap new and unfinished battleships.

WHEN our statesmen deal with British statesmen, especially when they look into the cold blue eyes of Lord Balfour, they suffer from a shivery "inferiority complex," which puts them at a disadvantage. They are free from that complex when they deal with their Latin friends.

A LEARNED party, discussing "scientific conquests of 1927," says the atom really isn't what we think it is. It's a "group of whirling waves, consisting of nobody knows what."

It's hard to keep track of science, but, at least, we know that there is no such thing as "solid matter."

A CONVENT and a number of religious schools in Mexico are closed, managers "accused of teaching religious faith to children." Twenty nuns were arrested.

Shortly afterward a powerful earthquake shook part of Mexico. That earthquake will have more effect on many Mexican minds than any argument for freedom of religion could have.

RUSSIAN Bolshevism has executed without trial Leonid Novikoff, head of the Trans-Caucasian Trade Commissariat.

Novikoff, a government official, was guilty of accepting graft, the miserable little sum of $950.

IF WISE, he would have come to the United States to steal a hundred millions and enjoy himself.

There they shoot grafters without trying them. Here occasionally we try them, but we don't shoot or even jail them, not the really big ones.

LLOYD GEORGE was amazed to find in Brazil American business men capturing South American trade. "For the moment all the push comes from Americans," says he. Thanks for the compliment. But the British are not backward.

Couzens Joins Plea Senate Probe Strike

THOROUGH INQUIRY ASKED

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, January 28.—Senator James Couzens, of Michigan has joined forces with those seeking to bring about a senatorial investigation of the coal strike situation in the fields of Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Following a study of the various reports issued on the bituminous deadlock he has strongly urged Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee to take steps looking to a favorable report on the proposal for an investigation, it became known today.

As a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the Michigan senator is in favor of immediate consideration of the resolution of inquiry offered by Senator Hiram Johnson, of California.

Whether the Johnson resolution will be comprehensive enough, he is not prepared to say, but has placed himself on record as fully in sympathy with the demand for a thorough inquiry.

READ SUN-TELE

Incidentally, members of the Senate committee today were in possession of copies of the Sun-Telegraph of Thursday, January 26, carrying the first installment of Fannie Hurst's series on strike conditions in the Pittsburgh district. Other copies have been laid before members of the lower House from Western Pennsylvania and Senator David A. Reed of Pittsburgh.

Meantime word comes from the Department of Labor that the government has practically abandoned its effort to bring about a settlement of the soft coal strike, which now has been going on for nearly 10 months. Officials are said to be convinced that a deadlock exists between miners and

"FOX" JURY READY FOR EVIDENCE

By International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 28.—With three women and nine men tentatively chosen to sit in judgment upon William Edward Hickman, the way was paved today for the beginning of testimony Monday as the Marian Parker kidnaping and murder trial stood adjourned over the week-end.

The jury to decide whether the confessed abductor and killer of the 12-year-old schoolgirl was sane or crazy at the time he stole and slew his little victim was virtually completed when Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco adjourned court late yesterday.

Although District Attorney Asa Keyes reserved the right to further challenge the tentative jurors when the trial is resumed next week, both the state and defense indicated they were satisfied with the selection.

Judge Trabucco announced he would act on the prosecution's motion at the resumption of the trial Monday morning before swearing in the jury.

WRITER STUDIES OTHER SIDE OF STRIKER

That she might get a correct perspective on all sides of the mine strike situation, Fannie Hurst, noted novelist, who is writing her findings in the Pittsburgh area coal fields exclusively for The Sun-Telegraph, visited the strike breakers' barracks at the Vesta Coal Company at Vestaburg. She is shown dining in the barracks with her husband, Jacques S. Danielson, and Joseph Edwards, vice president of the coal company.

HICKMAN LED TO COURTROOM

There was no attempt on the part of William Edward Hickman's jailors to conceal the contempt and loathesomeness with which they regarded "The Fox" as they led him to court for the opening of his trial in Los Angeles. Clyde Peters, Frank Dewar anr Fred Bogie, who have had almost constant association with him since his incarceration, show plainly what they think of the fiend-killer of little Marian Parker.

QUIZ MYSTERY GIRL HERE

Gloria Sigmann, 23, pretty and expensively dressed, admitting herself to be a drug addict, police say, replied only "Why bring that up?" when questioned in Morals Court today as to how she came to have an $8-a-day room at the William Penn Hotel, and what preceded a fainting spell in Smithfield street at Diamond street last night. Magistrate A. D. Brandon held her over for a mental examination.

The girl was picked up in the street last night and, after being treated at the Allegheny General Hospital, was taken to the matron's department at Central Police Station. She refused to tell police about herself except to give a Baltimore (Md.) address which, police say, is fictitious.

Letters found in the girl's baggage lead police to believe she is a show girl, although she denies this. Several pieces of baggage found in her room in the William Penn Hotel contain expensive cloth-

OPERATORS QUESTIONED BY FANNIE HURST

In the accumulation of material for her articles on the coal strike, the second of which will appear in The Sunday Sun-Telegraph, Fannie Hurst interviewed executives of the principal coal companies yesterday. They received her courteously, answered her questions unreservedly, and discussed the strike calmly, even good-humoredly.

Though known to be burning with indignation over destruction of property and attacks on strike-breakers, for which they blame the strikers, they made no accusations—with one exception. Even when suggestions were thrown out which would have afforded them an opening, had they desired it, to express their feelings and lay before Miss Hurst their indictment of the union miners, they steered clear of it.

Their silence on the subject was, in fact, so marked as to raise the suspicion that they had agreed in advance that the sagacious course for them to pursue in their conversation with the famous novelist would be scrupulously to avoid denunciation of the strikers.

ACCIDENTS INCREASE

There was, as noted, however, one exception. Miss Hurst was in the office of C. E. Lesher, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and the conversation turned to the subject of accidents in the mines, which the union men say have shown an increase, attributable, according to their version, to employment of unskilled and inefficient miners as strike breakers. The coal company executives said they had not knowingly employed a single inexperienced man. They admitted that their accident ratio had at times, of late, run as high as one fatality per 200,000 tons of coal produced, as against the extremely low ratio of one fatality per 1,000,000 tons attained in certain mines before the strike.

A possible explanation, it was suggested, lay in the fact that while none of the miners was a tyro, some had come from regions in which working conditions, particularly as regards falls of slate, were somewhat different from those obtaining in the Pittsburgh Coal Company mines in which they are now employed.

CHARGES SABOTAGE

L. E. Young, vice president in charge of production, had shown signs of being restive as questions on this point were pressed. Finally he exploded.

"Many of our accidents," he declared, "have been caused by union men or union sympathizers who sneaked into the mines and tampered with the machinery. We have had cases in which spikes were deliberately thrown into delicate mechanism, causing thousands of dollars of damage, and endangering the lives of our workers. We have had to contend with sabotage."

But, apart from his outburst, there were no bitter words.

Warmer Sunday, Promise

The present cold spell reached its peak this morning with marks of 9 degrees at 9, 10 and 11 o'clock, and a prospect of slight abatement tonight and a rise Sunday that will carry the mercury into the upper twenties.

The lowest temperature predicted for tonight by Forecaster W. S. Brotzman is 10 degrees. Tomorrow the high pressure belt will have passed here, he said, and southerly winds will bring milder weather.

A light snow, not sufficient to be measured at the weather bureau, fell last night and drifted to a depth of several inches in outlying districts.

SHOOTING IN GARAGE PROBED

Patrolman Glurg Shelton, champion pistol shot of the Pittsburgh police force, is suspended and under arrest in Central Police Station as a result of a shooting in a garage at Fifth and Sixth avenues last midnight.

Shelton, in company with Patrolman Joseph Skillen and Detective Guy Dailey, were returning a car they had rented to attend a shooting match at the Greensburg state police barracks when, according to Inspector Ben Marshall, Shelton, without provocation, drew his gun and fired a shot at Albert Gettel, an attendant, who was walking across the floor.

Gettel dropped to the floor uninjured, and Shelton, poised for a second shot, was thrown to the floor and disarmed by Patrolman Skillen. Shelton was taken to his home by Skillen. Dailey said he had departed a moment before the shooting occurred. He will not be suspended if his story coincides with the version told by the policemen, according to Inspector Clyde Eleburn.

When the manager of the garage was informed of the occurence this morning he informed Inspector Ben Marshall, who conducted the investigation. Skillen will not be suspended, according to Marshall.

Marshall, suspending Shelton, said that he would make information, charging him with pointing and discharging firearms.

An anonymous call was received at detective bureau last midnight that there was a shooting at Fifth and Sixth avenues. A squad investigated and reported that they could find no trace of anything wrong.

5 Autos in Boulevard Crash

A woman may die and two men were injured seriously when five automobiles piled up on Bigelow boulevard in the vicinity of Twenty-eighth street about 8 o'clock this morning.

The injured woman is Mrs. Lottie McIntyre, address not learned. She suffered a probable fracture of the skull and internal injuries. Hospital authorities say her condition is critical.

The men injured are John Provan, 540 Singer street, and Girard Eichenlaub, Creedmore avenue. All were taken to the West Penn hospital.

The accident, police say, was caused by one of the cars skidding while attempting to pass another. Sam Seltzer, a partner in the Seltzer Merchandise Company, 834 Grant street, driver of the machine which police blamed for the pileup, was arrested.

In Senate Race as "Wet"

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 28.—William S. Adams, Harrisburg hotel manager, today announced as a wet candidate for Republican nomination for United States Senator in opposition to Senator David A. Reed.

"I will not let Dave Reed pussy-foot his way into the United States Senate," Adams said in his announcement. "I want Reed to announce where he stands on the wet and dry issue.

"There are other issues. In Western Pennsylvania miners and their families are living in fields in tents. This is not right. It is not Christianity."

ONE REAPS FAME—THE OTHER PRISON CELL

Lindbergh flew through storm and fog to Paris and is honored by the entire civilized world, while Hickman's course led him to murder and a felon's cell, with execution looming as his "reward."

Dirigible Los Angeles Lands on Speeding Ship's Deck

DIRIGIBLE LANDS ON SHIP

LAKEHURST, N. J., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—After alighting on the deck of the Airplane Carrier Saratoga at sea off Newport, R. I., the Los Angeles, first dirigible ever to have accomplished that feat, was safely back in her hangar today.

Although Commander Charles E. Rosendahl was non-committal on his return, Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of naval aeronautics at Washington, was enthusiastic in his praise of the feat and the possibilities it shows.

The operation was a hazardous one, as the big silver bag is 680 feet long and the entire length of the Saratoga is only 880 feet, little more than half of which is available as a landing stage.

Although Navy officials here refused to discuss the details, referring all inquirers to Washington, it was assumed that the operations took place in the following manner, as they had been carefully rehearsed on paper:

With both ships making good speed, that of the Saratoga being estimated at between 15 and 30 knots, the Los Angeles nosed gently down and came to a stop with its control cabin just barely touching the deck. She lay with her nose just abaft the funnels and superstructure of the airplane mother, her stern sticking far out over the stern of the Saratoga.

To bring the dirigible down, lines were thrown to the crew of the Saratoga, who helped warp the big ship into position. The dirigible could be safely lashed in this position, experts thought, until refueling equipment was placed with which such operations could be simulated.

Satisfied the test was a success, Commander Rosendahl found it easy to cast off from the Saratoga and point the big ship back toward her hangar.

to an abrupt close at the end of a long day's session when Keyes passed the jury after exercising only four of the 20 peremptory challenges allowed the state.

The grizzled prosecutor was on his feet in the next instant, however, demanding the right to avail himself of his remaining challenges as Jerome Walsh, chief defense counsel, passed the jury with four defense challenges unused.

Out of the 47 prospective jurors called to the box, five were barred because they were opposed to capital punishment. One woman was excused when she said she was too nervous to sit in on the trial.

A talesman who happened to be a personal friend of Richard Cantillon, associate defense counsel, was allowed to leave by mutual consent of the court and opposing attorneys.

Among all of those questioned regarding what reports they had heard of the kidnaping and killing, one or two said they had listened on the radio to details of the crime. All but fixe owned radio sets.

One woman affirmed she never would permit a radio in her home, while another was equally as positive she never was able to hear anything over the radio.

None of the prospective jurors had attended any church since December 15, last, and none had heard any preacher discuss the kidnaping and slaying of Marion Parker.

DENIED HER BROTHER WHEN SHE WON'T PAY

Mrs. Louise Yarsky, 38, of 2711 Sarah street, South Side, caught a passing glimpse of her brother, John Paulek, 22, whom she had not seen for 20 years, when he was driven in front of her store yesterday by three men in an automobile after one of them had demanded $250 from her to "deliver" her brother to her.

Explaining that the brother had come to Canada from Germany two years ago in an endeavor to make a living and ultimately enter the United States, Mrs. Yarsky said she had no intimation the boy was being brought to Pittsburgh.

"I thought the man was fooling when he asked me for $250 and told me he had my brother here," Mrs. Yarsky said. "I told him to bring the boy to me, but he refused until I gave him the money, which I would not do. Then he left and I saw him cross the street and get into a machine in which were three men. One of them I recognized from family resemblances as my brother. I rushed to the street, but the machine drove away and I had only the license number and style of car."

JERSEY U. S. ATTORNEY, WALTER G. WINNE, QUITS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Walter G. Winne, United States Attorney for New Jersey yesterday filed at the Department of Justice and tendered his resignation, effective March 1. Judge James W. McCarthy of Hudson county, New Jersey, was recommended by Senator Edge of New Jersey, to succeed Winne. It was expected that the appointment will so be made.

FIRE ROUTS TWO FAMILIES

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 28.—A fireman was injured, probably fatally, two families were left homeless and property loss of $3,000 was caused by fire which razed the business building of Michael Amer & Son at Youngstown, nine miles east of here, last night. Firemen were summoned from Greensburg, Latrobe and Ligonier.

Charles Vachal, 34, Latrobe fireman, was caught beneath a falling cornice and suffered a broken back. He was taken to the Latrobe Hospital. The families lived on the second and third floors, one woman being partly overcome by smoke.

Get Girl Clues in Butler

By International News Service.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 28.—Search for Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing college freshman, suddenly shifted to Louisiana, Arkansas and Alabama today.

This was the result of a story told in letters to her parents in Butler, Pa., by Miss Helen Coss.

A girl who said she was Miss Smith was pictured by the Pennsylvania girl as fighting her way against the world to prove unjust the alleged criticisms of her relatives and teachers. She was employed in giving away chewing gum in Louisiana, Arkansas and Alabama.

Three state detectives of the large group here received orders to be ready to start south on a moment's notice.

Miss Coss was being interviewed by authorities at Covington, La.

BUTLER, Pa., Jan. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. James Coss today placed little credence in the story told by their daughter, Helen, that she had been traveling throughout the South with the missing Smith College student, Frances St. John Smith.

The Coss family recently moved here from Canton, O., and Helen disappeared from home December 26. Letters received from Stuttgard and Conway, Ark., were the first the family had heard from her. They were signed "Alma Stewart," but were written in the girl's handwriting, the parents said.

The letters gave no return address, according to the parents. They advanced a theory that the girl was trying to explain her own absence from home by describing Miss Smith's "motives."

Zero Snap Kills 4 in Chicago

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A sub-zero cold snap which descended on Chicago today was blamed for the deaths of three men and one woman, while three other persons were taken to hospitals suffering from the cold.

The frozen body of a negro, his head caught in the window of a grocery store, was found by police who believe the negro was trying to break into the store and had raised the window which dropped and held him fast.

Rudolph Kroft, 20, St. Louis, fell under the wheels of a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific train on which he was stealing a ride and was killed after becoming numb from the cold and another man was found dead in the street and a woman died of heart disease believed caused by the cold.

The official weather reading here was 2 below zero, but unofficial readings showed 10 below in suburbs. Warmer weather was forecast for Sunday.

TOLD BROTHER ILL, DIES

By Universal Service.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Jan. 28.—When J. C. Luke received news that his brother, the Rev. T. M. Luke, pastor of the Uvalde, (Ga.) Methodist Church was critically ill, he fell dead from a heart attack. News received later stated the minister is recovering following an acute attack of appendicitis.

LINDY LANDS SAFELY AT BOGOTA FIELD

By Universal Service

BOGOTA, Colombia, Jan. 28.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh completed the second leg of his good-will flight in South America at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon when he brought his famous plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, down to a safe landing on Madrid Field, on the outskirts of this city.

The flying Colonel brought his machine down on a field which swarmed with thousands of spectators who had waited at the field since before noon to witness his landing. The crowds, however, were fairly well held back by the large forces of troops and police, who formed a cordon about the famous plane as soon as it came to a stop, although a few of the more elusive evaded the police lines for a close-up view of the plane.

Lindbergh was met on the landing field by a number of high Colombian government officials, the American minister to Colombia, Samuel H. Piles, and representatives of the American colony in Bogota.

The flight from Cartagena to this place, a distance of 300 miles, required just six hours' flying.

CONFERENCES FAIL.

Shortly after officials of the United Mine Workers of America appeared at the White House before Christmas with a personal appeal to President Coolidge for intervention, efforts were initiated by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis to bring the warring groups together. Several conferences to this end were held, but to no avail.

Chairman Watson of the Interstate Commerce body has agreed to appoint a sub-committee at an early date to consider the Johnson resolution. This will be the first step in the proposed investigation.

HELD AS CHECK PASSER, UNABLE TO KEEP DATE

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 28.—Arrested here yesterday after he is alleged to have attempted to pass a worthless check for $50 on the Wheeling Bank, William Carlisle, 18, of Pittsburgh, admitted, police say, of having passed bad checks totaling $1,000 on the Mellon bank in Pittsburgh. Carlisle, fashionably attired, said his one regret at being arrested was that it would necessitate his breaking a date with a girl.

RAID AVELLA HOME, GET MASH, PRISONER

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 28.—Four thousand gallons of mash was destroyed and a small quantity of liquor confiscated when county officers raided the home of Henry Giorgetti, near Avella, last night. Police say he was preparing for a big run of whisky in a 100-gallon still, which was confiscated. Giorgetti was arrested.

FIVE AUTOS WRECKED -:- THREE PERSONS INJURED -:- IN BOULEVARD CRASH

WOMAN SERIOUSLY INJURED

Three persons were injured, a woman critically, when five automobiles piled up in Bigelow boulevard near Twenty-eighth street, early today. Above is shown one of the machines with the side smashed.

THIS CAR BLAMED

Sam Seltzer, a member of the firm of Seltzer Merchandise Company, 634 Grant street, was the driver of this car. He was charged with having been responsible for the crash and was lodged in Center Avenue Police Station.

INNOCENT VICTIM

Here's another badly damaged car. The driver was following one of the other machines and was unable to stop. He piled on, smashing the front end and swerving across the boulevard into the path of cars coming in the other direction.

"BUCKLED" IN COLLISION

The driver of this car stopped before hitting the pile, but another car following plowed into the rear, buckling his differential and drive shaft. Police had to call wrecking cars to remove the damaged machines.

THURSTONS DO THEIR BIT

MAGICIAN DISTRIBUTES BLANKETS TO STRIKERS

THURSTON TO GIVE BENEFIT

Howard Thurston, renowned magician who will give a benefit show for miners' relief at the Pitt Theater Friday afternoon, recently visited the strikers' barracks at Castle Shannon, Mollenauer and Curry and distributed baby dolls and blankets. Baby dolls came rather high for little girls in the mining district this year and they were extremely grateful to the man of magic for his thoughtful gifts.

MRS. THURSTON BUSY

Mrs. Thurston's heart was touched with pity for the suffering women and children in the cold wooden barracks. "Something must be done for these poor people," she declared and insisted that she be allowed to help her famous husband in preparing Friday's benefit.

JANE AIDS PARENTS

Like her parents, Miss Jane Thurston, the magician's daughter, took an active part in distributing relief to the miners and their families. The camera caught Jane and her father administering to a comely daughter of the mines at Mollenauer. "How can one be happy when he hasn't clothes enough to keep him warm?" Miss Thurston wanted to know.

STORMY AUTHOR, FOE OF KING; DIES IN EXILE

MENTONE, France, Jan, 28.—(AP.)—Vicente Blasco Ibanez, famous Spanish novelist, died at his villa here at 3:30 o'clock this morning, a political exile. His son, Igfrido, who hurried here from Valencia, Spain, and arrived at 1 a. m., was the only member of the Ibanez family present at the bedside.

Ibanez, who was a diabetic, caught cold a few days ago. The cold settled in his lungs and bronchial pneumonia developed. He was 61.

Ibanez returned to Fontana Rosa, his home here, a few weeks ago, from Paris. He immediately began to work on plans to make the property surrounding his villa a retreat for the writers of the world, wishing to leave it as a "Garden of Novelists."

Ibanez, after attaining world-wide renown as a novelist, attracted attention as an opponent of King Alfonso and the Primo de Rivera administration in Spain. His caustic attacks against the King led to his conviction for lese majeste, but Ibanez kept out of reach of the Spanish government by exiling himself in France.

The purpose of his campaign against the ruler and other government officials, including De Rivera, the military dictator of Spain, the novelist admitted in several of his pamphlets, was to overthrow the monarchy and have set up in Spain a republican form of government.

"It is not the military directory, but the degenerate Alfonso who is mainly responsible for the troubles in Spain and the catastrophe in Morocco, Ibanez wrote in one of his early manifestos of his campaign. "Never has history shown a monarch more deceitful and less powerful than the cruel and faithless puppet of the Spanish throne.

"The time has come to put an end to the new era of the inquisition, and for that accomplishment Alfonso must go. I will know no rest until the country is free."

During the controversy many prominent persons took up the cause of King Alfonso and denounced Ibanez. One of these was Benigno Varella, an editor and duelist, who declared that he would slap the face of the novelist in order to force him to fight a duel.

The reply of Ibanez to this was that, although he had fought nine duels, he would pay no attention to this "propagandist," but was ready at any time to fight a duel with King Alfonso or Primo De Rivera.

The wife and children of Ibanez continue to reside at Valencia, Spain, where his wife died January 21, 1925. The novelist in a statement declared that his wife's sudden death, although she had been in ill health 12 years, had been due to shock, caused by the King's sequestration of all his property in Spain.

On July 4, of the same year, Ibanez married at Mentone, Mme, Dona Elena Ortazar Buinga, widow of a Chilean diplomat. The wedding was attended only by witnesses.

Ibanez was born at Valencia, Spain, in 1867. He turned to literature as a young man, but his early novels failed to attract much attention. They were mostly word pictures of the provincial life in and about Valencia. Later, however, he developed an individual and realistic style and his works gradually grew in popularity all over the world until he ranked as one of the most widely known authors. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," a novel of the war, was his first remarkable success.

NIAGARA FALLS FREEZING, WATER STOPPED

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—With the ice piling up in Niagara River above the falls, blocking off the flow of water, indications point to a complete freezing over of the cataracts if the present frigid weather continues. The great mass of rushing waters plunging over the brink have already been reduced to small indifferent streams almost entirely silencing the usual deep roar of the falls as it plunges on to the ice mounds below.

The islands at the brink are clothed in a white garment of snow, while the freezing spray has transformed trees and shrubbery into a crystal fairyland.

Down at the base of the falls, the ice mounds are fast piling up, while stretching across the gorge is an ice bridge. In the immediate vicinity of the falls the bridge is solidly intact, extending many feet below the water and as much as 12 to 15 feet above the surface.

With the temperature remaining at a point several degrees below freezing, old inhabitants of the city claim that every indication points to a repetition of the spectacle of several years ago, when the falls were solidly frozen over so that the flow of water was altogether stopped.

Mountain Killer Caught ↓

CAUSE

Believing other men were paying attention to his wife, Mrs. Elsie Wolford, 29, John Leslie Wolford, 65, a mountaineer went "gunning" Thursday afternoon, killing Ed Hughes, 35, store clerk of Mt. Braddock.

ACCUSED

Threatening the life of Robert Jordan, Wolford broke into his cottage in the hills back of Mt. Braddock and engaged in a gun battle with him which ended when Jordan tackled Wolford barehanded and overpowered him.

SPECTATOR

When she left her home to feed the pig Mrs. Jordan saw Wolford dash into her home. She witnessed the gun battle and the grim tussle on the floor of the kitchen while her four months' old baby cooed in his crib nearby.

JORDAN HOME IN HILLS

Lurking about this humble cottage all afternoon, and watched with terror haunted eyes, Wolford, the murderer, waited for an opportunity to shoot Jordan. When Mrs. Jordan left by rear door (arrow), Wolford dashed in and fired point blank at her husband. The Wolford mountain farm is situated half a mile up in the hills from this peaceful looking cottage. It was here Chief of Detectives A. A. Dowling and his men found Wolford held captive by Jordan, his intended victim.

WHERE HUGHES WAS SHOT

It was into this general store of Benjamin York, at Mt. Braddock, that Wolford walked and fired a shot at the young clerk, Hughes, killing him. "Better give yourself up," advised York, who points to scene of the crime. "Got another one to kill!" Wolford is said to have replied. The 32-caliber revolver which fired the fatal shot is shown in the circle. Wolford discarded the revolver for a rifle when he went after Jordan.

JAILED

John Leslie Wolford, 36 years older than his wife, and described as madly jealous of her, is in the Fayette county jail on a charge of murder. Mrs. Wolford described a life of beatings and hardships.

PART OF THE ORCHESTRA

It was an old-fashioned barn dance that hundreds in the Mt. Pleasant district after the Fiddlers' Convention was held there last night. The musicians came from far and wide, and despite a snowstorm which covered the ground in half an hour, all of Mount Pleasant crowded into the National Guard auditorium to hear them play and then to dance the old square dances.

BANJO CHAMPION

J. B. McCulley, of Cumberland and Canonsburg, champion banjo player of Maryland.

OLD-TIMERS GET TOGETHER

Here is a group of real old-timers who took part in the program. Mr. Clements drew the bow across the strings of the old violin that has been his constant companion for 50 years. Saylor plays the same harp he made for himself in the days of his youth, while Bates' violin is 200 years old and has been in his family seven generations.

Gloria Swanson On Journey To New York—Rumor Bankers Will Back Her New Pictures

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.

GLORIA SWANSON slipped quietly out of town early this week for a trip to New York. She didn't breathe a word to any of her friends that she even had such a journey in mind. The reason for this hurried trip is said to be a business conference with Joseph Kennedy.

Miss Swanson is to make pictures for him. No definite announcement has been forthcoming, but I think it is a well enough established fact to make it no crime to print the story. She begins with her next picture, which is to be made at a studio other than United Artists.

Joseph Schenck has arranged to release her pictures through United Artists. But there the responsibility ceases. In other words, there will be no financial backing from U. A. It is said Joseph Kennedy and a group of New York bankers are furnishing the wherewithal to make the next Swanson productions.

Probably they were influenced to lend her their bank rolls after they saw "Sadie Thompson." I hear it is one grand picture.

The air has been filled with rumors that Robert Kane and First National had agreed to disagree. In fact, I suspect they have come to a parting of the ways. But the trouble doesn't seem serious, for there is a chance that Mr. Kane, who purchased "Satan's Bushel," may release this picture through First National. I'm told he is negotiating both with F. N. and United Artists. "Satan's Bushel" is based on a current magazine story and is what one might call a farming epic. It has its locale in the Middle West during the time when the wheat fields are ripe. Harvesting is always good atmosphere.

Joseph Schenck has gone to Chicago. It's said he will meet Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky in the Windy City and discuss some business plans. It isn't an amalgamation as much as I should like to rumor, but rather, I should say, a meeting to arrange for the presentation of United Artists' and Paramount's pictures. The purchase by the Fox Company of the west coast chain has made it necessary for all the film companies to look the theater situation squarely in the face. Of course, controlling the west coast doesn't mean that there will be nothing but Fox pictures in these houses. Fox or no other single producing organization can make enough pictures, but it does mean that the Fox Company will give its own wares preference. That's human nature.

You always sort of instinctively feel when Clive Brook is in a picture that it must have a part where a hero could be a little sad, a little remote and terribly proper. I don't know what kind of a character he plays in "The Yellow Lily," but I know he has been selected to play opposite Billie Dove in this story by Lajos Bird. He has been borrowed from Paramount by First National for the occasion.

Charlie Chaplin believes in rewarding good work. Even if he didn't realize himself that Merna Kennedy and Harry Crocker both did very good work in "The Circus," after reading the New York reviews which were unanimously expressed in favor of his picture, he'd have to think a few good things about these two young people. He has engaged both of them to play in his next picture. His next film—ah—that's the thing. He doesn't know himself.

Yo, Ho! And All That

JOSEPH HENABERY, director, Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes are the trio responsible for "Sailor's Wives." Cameras are such a novelty to them that they thought they'd have their picture taken.

DRAMA, VARIETY IN THEATERS

Opening Monday, there will be a week of Shakespeare in the Nixon, presented by a company headed by Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper. "The Merchant of Venice" is to be the initial play of the engagement, which will include four other plays. Matinees will be given Wednesday and Saturday.

Grace George comes to the Alvin Monday in Robert E. Sherwood's successful comedy, "The Road to Rome," the supporting company including McKay Morris, J. M. Kerrigan, Edward Wever and a score of others. The usual matinees will be played Wednesday and Saturday.

The third and final week of the engagement of Thurston in the Pitt will begin Monday evening. He plays the regular Saturday matinee today in this theater.

The Davis, beginning Monday, will present a bill of Keith-Albee vaudeville headed by Rae Samuels, singer of character songs. Madge Bellamy will be seen on the screen in "Silk Legs."

Jean Hersholt plays the part of Dr. Juttner, the lovable old tutor to Ramon Novarro, in the "Student Prince", coming to the Penn next week.

Ann Popove, dancing and singing violinist, will be part of the stage entertainment at the Grand next week. On the screen will be "The Shepherd of the Hills."

Professional boxing talent on the Pacific Coast assisted in the filming of the prize fight scenes in "The Main Event," the new Vera Reynolds picture which will be the feature in Loew's Aldine next week.

Vaudeville in the Harris next week will have "Fifty Miles From Broadway" as the feature attraction. The screen attraction will be "Turkish Delight," featuring Rudolph Schildkraut.

Rose's twenty-five Midgets, rated as one of the biggest acts in vaudeville, will be in the Sheridan Square next week. The two photoplays will be "Silk Legs" and "The Main Event."

A gypsy ballet and an oriental fantasy are spectacular features in "Chick Chick", the burlesque revue which will be presented next week in the Gayety.

"Peaches," a dancer, is featured in "Laffin' Thru", next week's show in the Academy.

In addition to the Vitaphone program in the Regent next week, there will be a showing of the western picture, "Jesse James." Fred Thomson plays the role of the bandit.

Gayety Acquired by Academy Owner

The Gayety Theater, formerly the home of Columbia burlesque, has been leased by George Jaffe, manager of the Academy, and beginning next week, it will be devoted to the presentations of burlesque revues by a permanent company. The new management announces that only shows appealing to the women as well as to men will be presented.

The recent merger involving the Columbia and Mutual burlesque circuits eliminated the Gayety as a Columbia theater and Mr. Jaffe secured a long-time lease of the property for a permanent stock organization.

With the merging of the Columbia and Mutual organizations, the best attractions of both "wheels" have been retained and will be booked over a circuit of 45 theaters, of which the Academy is a link in the chain. Hereafter the circuit will be known as the United Burlesque. While operating the Gayety under its new policy Manager Jaffe will continue in the management of the Academy.

FOUNDERS' DAY AT BELLEVUE CHURCH

Founders' Day services will be held Sunday in the Bellevue Christian Church, with special programs and a review of the congregation's progress during its 31 years. Invitations have been sent to the 31 charter members now living. The charter members will be honored in the Bible School beginning at 9:45 o'clock. A brief history of the church will be given by J. G. Schmucker, former church clerk. Dr. George W. Gerwig, secretary of the Board of Public Education and a member of the church, will deliver an address at the communion service. O. M. Waddle is in charge of the entire program.

The Rev. Dr. John Ray Ewers, pastor of the East End Christian Church, South Highland avenue and Alder street, will speak Sunday evening on the theme "Can Jews, Catholics and Protestants Live Together?" At the Open Forum questions will be received for a half hour and the service will close at 9:15 o'clock. Dr. Ewers will give a report of the recent dinner in Baltimore, Md., attended by representatives of the various faiths. The morning subject will be "Christianity or Catastrophe?"

DR. SHELTON BACK

Returning after a brief trip during which he preached in the Third Presbyterian Church of Chattanooga, the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, will preach on Sunday morning, especially for the 52 new members recently received. His subject in the evening will be, "Is Life Really Worth Living?" There will be attractive music at both services, with James F. Croft and Mrs. Elma B. Sulzner as soloists.

Beginning tomorrow, the Rev. C. J. Loehr, of St. Paul's Luthern Church, Pennsylvania avenue and Manhattan street, will give a series of nine Sunday evening lecturers on the principal doctrines of the Christian Religion.

"The Shadowed Glen" will be the subject of the Rev. Dr. Percival H. Barker's sermon Sunday morning in the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church, Fifth and Penn avenues. Dr. Barker will use as his theme in the evening "The Pharisee In Modern Society."

Adj. Richard H. Ives, of the Volunteers of America, will speak at the Downtown Mission Sunday evening on "The Story of My Conversion." Solos will be sung by Mrs. Ives, Junia Ingram, child soprano, and Capt. William Collins. Oscar McCurdy, field representative of the Christian Laymen's Union, will speak in the evening at the East End Mission on "What is Your Life Worth?" In the afternoon, the Rev. Dr. John Ernst, pastor of St. Peters' Lutheran Church, will address the children's rally, at the East End Mission, and William D. Rue, will speak at the Downtown Mission.

CONTINUE REVIVALS

The ninety-ninth anniversary of the Arch Street Episcopal Church, Arch and North Diamond streets, will continue for another week, with revival meetings conducted by Maj. John Russell's, Welsh evangelist. "Apostolic Religion" will be Major Russell's subject at 11 a. m. and in the evening he will speak on "How Do You Do?" In the afternoon he will preach at 2:30 o'clock to the men of the congregation and at the same hour Mrs. Russell will speak to the women.

"The Value of Prayer" will be the subject of the sermon of the Rev. Michael Ehrenfeldt at 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the Old Methodist Protestant Church, Union avenue. Mr. Ehrenfeldt will speak on "The Necessity of the New Birth," at the evening service. Scriptural readings will be conducted by James Ellenberger, president of the Christian Endeavor Society. During the illness of the Rev. J. R. C. Clark, his son, A. R. Clark, is acting as chaidman of the various services of the church.

"What the Nations Will Bring Into the Kingdom," will be the subject of the Rev. B. M. Paul, pastor of the Lawrenceville Presbyterian Church, Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. A young people's service will be held in the church at 7:45 o'clock in the evening, when W. H. Seybold will speak on "The Young People of Today."

GULF TOURISTS STRESS WHARF NEEDS

The need of water front improvements in Pittsburgh for the interchange of rail and water shipments were stressed in the report of a special committee studying the situation here, submitted last night at a reunion dinner of the Pittsburgh Mississippi Gulf tourists held in the annex of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. William B. Rodgers is chairman of the committee.

A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company, spoke on "Pittsburgh's Future Transportation Needs." William T. Mossman, of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, discussed "Distribution and the Rivers." "Pittsburgh Problems—River Terminals and Flood Protection," was the subject of Morris Knowles, of Morris Knowles, Inc.

The inauguration of a great program to establish outdoor sports and recreation facilities was urged by A. W. Robertson, president of the Philadelphia Company, who presided at the dinner, which was attended by 150 prominent business men. Mr. Robertson said that in many other cities Pittsburgh was looked upon as a place where "there is nothing to do." By providing facilities for sport, Pittsburgh woud be helping those who live here and put a stop to such an undercurrent of criticism, the speaker said.

The purpose of the reunion dinner was to review the tour of southern cities made November 9 to 18 by 75 leading citizens, and to receive the report of Mr. Rodgers' committee on the tour and recommendations for river improvements here. The committee stated in its report that the extensive facilities which southern cities have provided for a great expansion of river trade after the completion of the Ohio river improvements were among things which most deeply impressed the tourists.

The report also dwelt upon the ample air fields which other cities are providing and urged a large flying field for Pittsburgh, to be located as conveniently as possible to the city itself. Other members of the committee were Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology; A. H. Burchfield, Morris Knowles, Lloyd W. Smith, Owen Kraft and Mr. Robertson.

CHAMBERLIN ON WAY EAST

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 28.—Clarence D. Chamberlin left Greensburg by train early today for Mifflin, Pa., whence he expects to take off in his small plane some time during the dey for New York.

After leaving his plane at Mifflin early in the week, Chamberlin visited Altoona, Johnstown and Greensburg.

HUGHES WINS BIG VICTORY

BEATS ATTEMPT TO GET RID OF DIPLOMATS

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent,
Special Cable Dispatch.

HAVANA, Jan. 28.—The United States yesterday matched wits with the nimblest of adversaries at the sixth Pan-American conference, and came out the victor.

It was a significant American triumph in the first real test of the Congress.

The American champion was former Secretary of State Hughes.

His two active opponents were Justice Salvador Urbina of the Mexican Supreme Court and Foreign Minister Gustavo Guerrero of Salvador, recognized as two outstanding critics of American policy in the Caribbean region. Hughes won because, alone he knew just what he wanted. His two adversaries lost because they were not quite quick-witted enough to stand and be counted at the same time.

The issue involved was whether the governing board of the Pan-American Union should be composed largely of diplomats or of non-diplomats. Mexico advocated vigorously the "dis-diplomatization" of the board. Dr. Guerrero did his best to aid his Mexican colleague, and at times even seemed to take the leadership in the struggle.

Behind the issue was the desire of Justice Urbina and Dr. Guerrero to take control of the union away from the Latin-American diplomats accredited to Washington. The United States sought to maintain substantially the status quo with the modification that any government might, if it desired substitute a representative for the diplomat.

Justice was frank in saying that Mexico was seeking to eliminate the diplomats. He said that diplomats are politicians, with nationalist desires, while the members of the governing board should be non-politicians, with international aspirations. What he did not say, but what he and his fellow advocates had in mind, was the argument that the diplomatic corps at Washington is too susceptible to the desires of the United States.

The Mexican delegate found some support for his view, notably from Dr. Guerrero. Mr. Hughes restricted the other republics to representation on the board by their diplomats already accredited to Washington.

President Jesus Salazar of the Peruvian Chamber of Deputies insisted on there being added to the Mexican proposal the positive statement that it did not prevent any republic from being represented by its diplomatic chief of mission at Washington. Such an addition, of course, contradicted Dr. Urbina's whole line of argument and specifically justified the maintenance of the governing board substantially as at present constituted.

There was much more talk. It was apparent that neither Justice Urbina nor Dr. Guerrero wished to have the Salazar modification added to the Mexican proposition. Then, Dr. Olaya Herrera of Colombia, as president of the first commission of the conference, put the question to a rising vote with the original proposal and the Peruvian modification joined.

There was much more discussion. Justice Urbina and Dr. Guerrero found plenty of support for their argument that the original Mexican proposal and the Peruvian modification should be voted on successively. Then Hughes arose.

The American leader said he would regret to see disagreement following apparent agreement. In his most pleasant vein, he pointed out that there were many who would vote for the Mexican project only in the belief that the Peruvian project, also, was to be approved. He indicated that it would indeed be distressing if the Mexican proposal should receive a unanimous vote only to have the Peruvian modification fail to receive a similar indorsement.

Hughes sat down and then got up again to join in the unanimous rising vote for the Mexican proposal giving all the republics right of independent representation on the governing board. This vote counted, Dr. Olaya put the question of the Peruvian declaration in favor of the diplomats at Washington.

Again Hughes bobbed upward and the great majority of his colleagues were equally prompt. Justice Urbina rose a bit uncertainly and looked toward Dr. Guerrero. Seeing the Salvadorean champion still seated, Justice Urbina plopped back into his own chair. Then came the little climax, and Hughes' triumph—Dr. Guerrero rose to be counted and Justice Urbina did likewise. It was unanimous. Hughes smiled. The first skirmish had been won.

COMMITTEE NAMED

A sub-committee was appointed to draft the preamble to the proposals for the organization of the Pan-American Union. Dr. Carolos Cuadra Pazos, Nicaraguan secretary of state, delivered an impassioned address indorsing Pan-Americanism and the policies of the United States.

He drew a parallel between the aid the United States now is giving Nicaragua and the aid previously given to Cuba.

Mexico and Salvador also managed to conduct a two-man filibuster so as to prevent an embarrassing roll call on the Mexican projects for drastically altering the organization of the Pan-American Union. They emphasized the need for unanimous agreement within the commission. It seemed apparent that a roll call on the more drastic Mexican proposals would find the Calles delegates with only a small minority on their side.

Dr. Jacobo Varela of Uruguay joined Hughes in expressing the belief that a vote to show the trend of sentiment on any proposal would do no harm and might lead to compromise. Of course, Hughes added, unanimous agreement would be needed for any treaty. Finally, Dr. Guerrero suggested that disputed points be referred to sub-committees on which the principle advocates would be represented. This was approved.

The commission on private international law considered the project submitted by Dr. Antonio De Bustamante, president of the conference, in accordance with the conclusions of the commission of jurists which met in Brazil last year. Eighteen republics, most of them with certain reservations, accepted the project. The United States abstained from voting because many of the matters covered were within the jurisdiction of the individual states.

EX-MAYOR LAUNCHES HOSPITAL PROJECT

WELLSVILLE GIVEN NURSES HOME AND $50,000

Wellsville, O., without hospital facilities and forced to send all such patients to East Liverpool, is soon to have such an institution. Former Mayor Byron D. Beacon, shown in the inset, has donated his own residence as a nurses' home and has contributed $50,000 toward the building of the hospital, conditional upon the city providing a site and guaranteeing to maintain the hospital after it is erected. Three free sites have already been offered for the project.

Hughes Explains Nicaragua Fuss to Rogers

WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 27.—You know we are doing a lot of hollering on various sides of this Nicaragua. Now one night at a little dinner in Havana last week, Secretary Hughes explained the whole thing to me in such plain language that even I could understand it, and, by the way, if we just knew that man like he really is he would be president by acclamation. He is just as common as any of us if it wasn't for his learning. He says the way the play come up we had to go in there, and that nobody wants us out of there half as bad as we want out. I am only quoting you a man that ought to know.

Yours second handedly,
WILL ROGERS.

MISS HURST DELIGHTS CONGRESS OF CLUBS

Every available seat in the auditorium was taken for the dinner which the Congress of Clubs gave last night in honor of Miss Fannie Hurst, who was in Pittsburgh to write a series of articles for the Sun-Telegraph. Just before the evening was brought to a close, Miss Hurst spoke briefly, but very delightfully, barely touching upon the duties which had made her a Pittsburgher for a few days. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, together with Mrs. W. C. McClure, program chairman, had arranged a program which included two groups of lovely contralto solos by Miss Sara Jamison Logan, with Miss Martha Hutson as her accompanist, Negro spirituals by the Tuskegee Jubilee Singers, and reviews of Miss Hurst's newest short story and her most recent book. The reviews were given, the first, by Mrs. J. deS. Freund, and of the book, "A President is Born," by Mrs. Marie Tello Phillips. Mrs. Margaret Briscoe Hopkins, of Amherst, Mass., who is also being a Pittsburgher for a short time, spoke, her subject being, "Presence of Mind," which she applied to Miss Hurst's work. With the Tuskegee Singers was E. D. Washington, son of Booker T. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute.

Mrs. Richard B. Perry was again elected president of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs, when the organization held its meeting yesterday in the Congress of Clubs. Others elected were: Mrs. Adolph Schmidt of McKeesport, first vice president; district vice presidents, Mrs. J. A. Gettig of Braddock, Mrs. H. L. Warner, Tarentum; Mrs. Stuart L. Robinson, Sewickley; Mrs. Thomas Lenfesty, Carnegie, and Mrs. G. J. Bryen, Duquesne, and the secretary, Mrs. Thomas Loring, Crafton. Mrs. H. F. Goodman, president of the Wimodausis Club, the hostess organization, welcomed the guests; Mrs. Perry responded, there was music by a sextet from the Woman's Club of Crafton and some interesting reports were given, all at the morning session. Luncheon, for which Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, Congress president, offered the invocation, was followed by two talks, each one of considerable interest. Miss Florence Dibert, second vice president in the General Federation, told of the last board meeting of the G. F. W. C. and of the conference on the cause and cure of war, saying that education—of spirit as well as mind—is the "trend of the age." Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl, vice president-at-large in the State Federation, introduced Mrs. Margaret Briscoe Hopkins, who had as her subject "Why Read?" which she answered with "To build up the critical challenge, for the release of spir., and for self-expression." "Verbalize your thoughts," Mrs. Hopkins urged. Mrs. John E. McKirdy, district vice president of the state, gave a word or two of greeting and Mrs. Lulu Mosby demonstrated the voting machine.

While opinions varied, the general conclusion arrived at during the College Club's discussion yesterday of "Has Feminism Created a New Moral Code?" was that feminists are seeking recognition and opportunity for women on the same basis as for man. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that in the progress of its activity and development, feminism has perhaps leaned toward immorality and laxness, the results of which are deplorable as evidenced in the extremes to which some young people go. On the whole, however, the frankness of the present day and the open-minded attitude toward all problems of morality were considered an improvement over the methods common in the past. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Henry McL. Hallett, Dr. Luba Robin Goldsmith and Mrs. John E. Nelson, in their description of the changing status of women, furnishing a basis for the discussion.

By mutual arrangement the Northhesks have been living apart for the last 12 months.

tion, who has a long list of crimes charged to strikers by the company's chief of police, made no reference to them; on the other hand he admitted the possibility that some of the police had not been tactful in their dealings with the strikers. If they possessed perfect discretion, he said, they would be occupying positions paying higher salaries than policemen receive.

KEPT THEIR TEMPERS

The nearest that any of the operators whom Miss Hurst interviewed came to disparaging the officers of the United Mine Workers of America was to say they were misguided. There was no invective—not even covert sneers. They kept their tempers admirably.

The sum and substance of what the operators told Miss Hurst was that coal companies are not philanthropic institutions but commercial enterprises, and they refused to renew the Jacksonville agreement because they were losing money under it. Lesher showed her what the actual losses were during the months preceding what the strikers call "the abrogation of the contract." Appropos of this last, she was asked to draw her own conclusions from the fact that the union has not filed suit for breach of contract.

Baker said he took pride in the fact that his company conformed to the Jacksonville agreement until its expiration on March 31, 1927.

NON-UNION COMPETITION

To justify the course of the Pittsburgh Coal Company in breaking with the union on August 10, 1925, Lesher called attention to the competition between union and non-union mines in Western Pennsylvania. He showed her a map of the area, with pins indicating the mines that had operated under the Jacksonville agreement and dots those that had had no understanding with the union. A line had been drawn, circumscribing the union mines, and Lesher pointed out that there were many non-union mines just across the boundary.

At the extreme edge of the union area was Banning mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, and only a short distance away was a non-union mine working on the same vein of coal. The non-union competitor, Lesher said, because of the lower wages that it paid, was able to secure a valuable Buffalo contract which the Pittsburgh Coal Company wanted. The company was forced, in consequence, to close its Banning mine, whereupon its union miners, according to Lesher, went to work in the non-union operation nearby. The upshot was that the Pittsburgh Coal Company decided to run on an "open shop" basis.

RECEIVERSHIP FORCED

Baker also directed Miss Hurst's attention to the losses that the coal companies had sustained under the Jacksonville agreement. He mentioned a number that had gone into the hands of receivers—the Carnegie Coal Company and others not so well known.

Miss Hurst asked Baker what his attitude was towards the proposed investigation of the strike by the United States Senate. He said the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation had nothing to conceal, but he would not like to have to spend a week in Washington and two or three other weeks in preparation for the hearings.

Baker said the strike was not interfering with the operations of his company—it has sufficient labor and is getting out coal.

BLOCK WAY TO HOUSES

One of the interesting things that Lesher told Miss Hurst was that the strikers at the Pittsburgh Coal Company's Lick Run mine at Curry had leased the land directly in front of the company houses from which they were evicted, and the company cannot get into its own houses without trespassing on the United Mine Workers' property. It is at Curry that the strikers' barracks stand directly across the street from the boarded up homes that they formerly occupied—a situation which has caused much comment.

Well supplied with information, Miss Hurst and her husband, Jacques S. Danielson, left last night for Atlantic City, where she will rest from her strenuous labors of the past week and prepare her other articles on the strike. They will be published exclusively in The Sun-Telegraph.

La Nuit Ensorcelee ..... Chopin-Aubert

(a) "L'apres-midi d'un Faune" ..... Debussy
(b) Entrance of the Little Fauns ..... Pierne
Spanish Rhapsody ..... Chabrier

Pittsburgh got sentimental about the New York Symphony Orchestra last year and brought it back to Syria Mosque last night. We paid the price and listened to some very commonplace music. There was a very large audience, however, who must have come to pay respect to Walter Damrosch, ever a favorite in this city.

The early part of the program, in spite of the heroic nature of the symphony was very dull. The second part devoted to pagan music was only noisy. Throughout the evening I could not help thinking that Damrosch has allowed the pedagogical side of his nature to overcome the emotional, for we certainly have never before heard him conduct in such routine manner. Many of his solo players, especially the brass choir, should visit other orchestras and learn how far behind they are in distinction of tone and finesse in execution.

Why such numbers as La Nuit Ensorcelee should be included in a dignified symphony program is beyond my comprehension. And of the Entrance of the Little Fauns, a charming kindergarten number, I can only repeat what Will Wentzell, our Pittsburgh composer, said, "If that's in the Lydian mode, hooray for Lydia!"

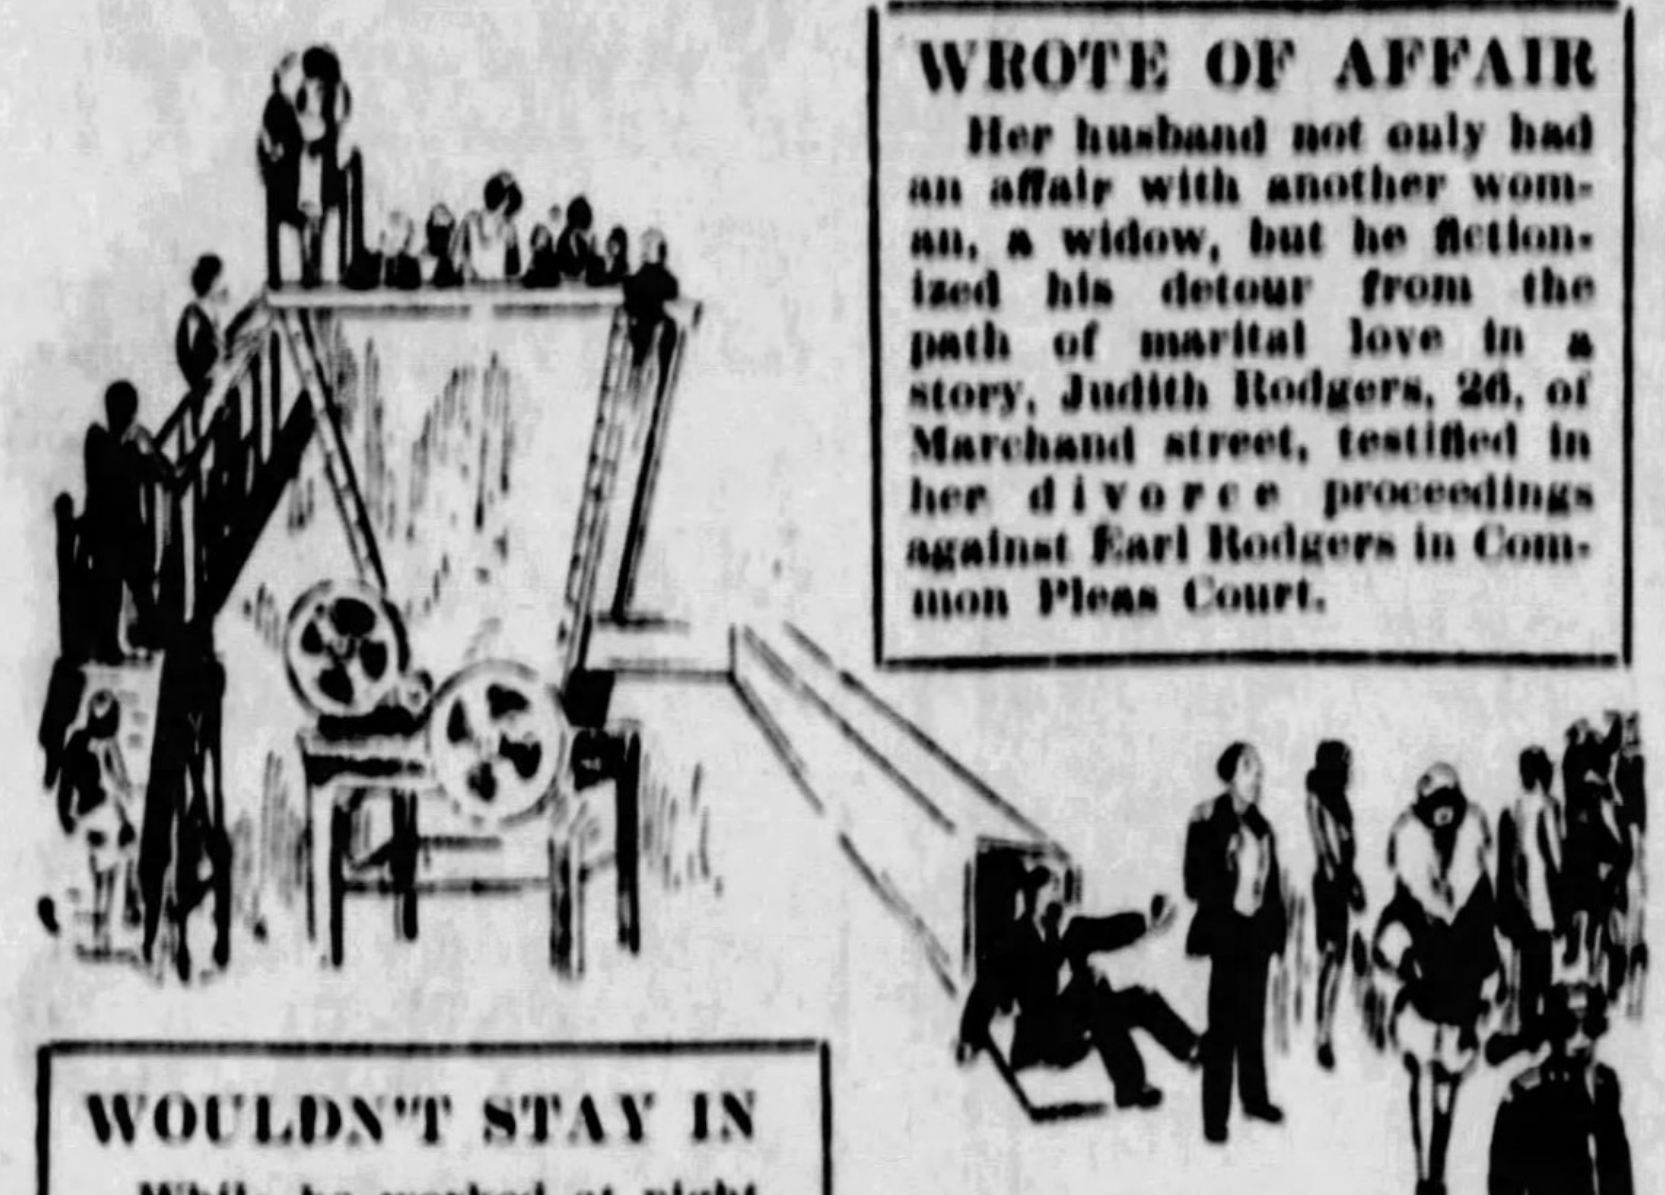
THE DIVORCE MILL



WROTE OF AFFAIR

Her husband not only had an affair with another woman, a widow, but he fictionized his detour from the path of marital love in a story, Judith Rodgers, 26, of Marchand street, testified in her divorce proceedings against Earl Rodgers in Common Pleas Court.

WOULDN'T STAY IN

While he worked at night his wife would go out and she refused to listen to his protests, Frank Eberlein, of Dormont, testified in his divorce action against Edith B. Eberlein, of Alder street. The husband charged misconduct and named Edgar V. Sill, a general distributing agent for the Carnegie Steel Company, as the man who called upon Mrs. Eberlein after the separation. The wife, contesting the action, denied the charges.

FIND BUILDINGS AT SLOCUM IN GOOD SHAPE

By Universal Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Conditions at Fort Slocum, on Davids Island, in Long Island Sound, off New Rochelle, were found by the citizens' committee investigating army housing at military posts located within the metropolitan area, to be in striking contrast to those existing at many of the forts in the vicinity of New York. The committee found most of the buildings on the reservation of a permanent character, of brick and stone construction, and in a good state of upkeep.

While the post has a permanent garrison of 400 men of the Eighteenth Infantry, including supply, medical and other detachments, under command of Col. Charles E. Humphrey, post commandant, Fort Slocum is used primarily as a recruiting depot, one of the most important in the East, where new recruits entering the Army are given their initial training in soldiers' work.

This part of the work is in charge of Lieut. Col. W. J. Davis, who superintends the business of overseas replacements. Col. Davis has seen a number of years' service at Fort Slocum and has personally superintended the construction of several of the permanent buildings. The administration building, the hospital and especially the permanent brick barracks are large, roomy and airy, the committee found. The post has a good water supply from the mainland, the heating equipment was found to be in good order and the sanitary arrangements, all within the barracks buildings, were regarded by the committee as being reasonably satisfactory.

SHACKS FOR RECRUITS

The committee found a number of war-time shacks on the reservation, but these were used only for new recruits and for the housing of non-commissioned officers not entitled to separate quarters and their families. Col. Humphrey pointed out that the government should not be held responsible for the housing of this class of non-coms because the quarters were given these men at their own request as a privilege. Otherwise they would be obliged to live in the barracks, separated from their families.

Whenever there was a heavy inroad of new recruits, the committee was informed, the war-time shacks were pressed into service as quarters to accommodate the overflow. The committee visited one of these "overflow" barracks filled with men who, in these dismal surroundings, were getting their first taste of army life. The visitors agreed that if these new recruits ever had any romantic ideas about army life these gloomy, flimsily constructed firetraps would soon take all the romance out of them.

The difference, however, between the new recruits and the soldiers stationed permanently in the wartime shacks at Fort Hamilton, on Governors Island and other "bad spots," the committee learned, was that the newcomers would soon be transferred to overseas posts while seasoned veterans were condemned to stay at home in unlivable quarters.

CROWD 900 IN

Fort Slocum sometimes accommodates up to 900 new recruits at one time. At such times the permanent brick barracks are insufficient, and the dingy, war-time shacks must be pressed into service for sleeping quarters, mess rooms and other accommodations. The committee inspected a large war-time frame structure, one of the largest of that type at any army post in the New York area and probably intended originally for a warehouse, which was being prepared to house new recruits in anticipation of a large influx from various recruiting stations. The place had a dismal, depressing appearance and looked more like a stable than a structure intended for human occupancy. The room was being prepared to house 180 men.

Fort Slocum receives recruits from stations within a territory from Maine to Georgia and as far west as Chicago. Only a few fortunate ones escape the ordeal of shivering for a few weeks of their training period in war-time shacks during the winter months.

SHOW BREAKS ATTENDANCE MARKS

All records for attendance at Pittsburgh automobile shows have been broken by the 1928 display, which closes tonight in Motor Square Garden. An average of 1,250 more persons have visited the display each day since the opening last Saturday than attended the exhibit last year, according to a statement today by W. N. Owings, secretary of the Pittsburgh Automobile Dealers' Association, under whose auspices the show is being staged.

The record number of new cars and new models included in the display is advanced by Mr. Owings as the reason for the record-breaking attendance. Improvements to engine and a new motor car style also have attracted thousands to the big display.

There is not a machine on the floor of the East Liberty structure, from the cheapest in price to the most expensive, that does not present some mechanical advance over similar cars exhibited last year, while in artistic body design and in studious attention to the perfection of details all are superior to the models of 1926. The development in the grade of excellence has been so marked in recent years that every car offered for public enjoyment or utility, whether priced at less than $500 or more than $10,000, is a quality car in all its appointments.

J. R. Pierpoint, president of the Dealers' Association, in speaking of the show, said:

"The public's universal demand is for better automobiles. The public is asking for superior performance, better style and improved appearance. These the automobile manufacturers are providing, with four-wheel brakes, chassis improvements, better upholstery and fittings, all at new low scales of prices. These improvements will bring about the greatest spring business in our history."

Other officers of the association who participated in arranging the show are: H. F. Gleason, R. R. McVicker, J. E. Lowe, W. N. Owings, I. W. Danforth, F. L. Dennis, T. F. Dunn, G. A Hoeveler, R. P. McAlister, E H. Neidringhaus, Guy Rea and Frank D. Saupp.

DAMROSCH LAUDS CONCERT VICTORY

"How wonderfully Pittsburgh has grown! For years a sort of backwoods community in respect to its habit of looking on certain idealities, it blossoms forth a truly cosmopolitan city, refer to the decision of your courts upholding the legality of holding symphony concerts on Sunday."

WALTER DAMROSCH

Walter Damrosch, dean of American musical conductors, in Pittsburgh with the New York Symphony Orchestra, was the speaker and his exclamations came in response to a reporter's good morning. He had heard of the victory of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society last week in the County Court opinion sustaining the legality of Sunday concerts.

"I am pleased with this bit of news, not so much for the people who have scored their point against century-old laws and ancient Puritanical habits, but because what it means for the good of Pittsburgh and its coming generations," said Mr. Damrosch. "A peaceful Sabbath is to be desired, but the people need also the exalted influences which come with the universal appreciation of good music. Those whose souls are lifted up by a great symphony are at heart deeply religious and cannot help feeling its righteous inspiration. If this court decision opens the way for the founding of a great orchestra here, it will be one of the most important occurrences in Pittsburgh's social and educational history.

"Much of my time now is given to radio broadcasting and we play on Sunday nights for the whole world and Pittsburgh. If we can come in on the air, why should anybody oppose Pittsburgh musicians playing symphonies in their own city before audiences of their own people? And when I speak of the radio I allude to a work that has grown to a hobby. I am thankful that I have lived to the era in which science enables us to carry art to the uttermost corners of the land."

What Is the Leap Year Privilege?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ONCE more, Leap Year and the Leap Year jokes are with us.

No one knows when or why it first became the custom for women to woo and propose marriage during Leap Year. But that the idea was once taken seriously is proved by the following extract from a law enacted in Scotland in 1288:

"It is a statute and ordaint that during the rein of his maist blissit Megeste, for ilk yeare knowne as lepe yeare, ilk mayden lady of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeake ye man she likes, albeit he refuses to taik hir to be his lawful wyfe, he shall be mulcted in ye sum ane poundis or less, as his estait may be; except . . . gif he can make it appeare that he is betrothit ane other woman, he shall be free."

Imagine the glee of gold diggers and anxiety of bachelors, if a similar law were enacted today, so that a girl might propose marriage in Leap Year to any unattached bachelor, and if refused, might collect a substantial sum from him!

WHETHER this law and others like it in France and Italy were ever repealed, I do not know. But by the time the prim Victorian era began the very idea of a young woman possessing the right to propose seemed ludicrous and gave rise to that chestnut, the Leap Year joke.

She laughs best who laughs last. Today the Leap Year joke is that anyone should doubt the right of a flapper to propose marriage. The only question is whether the modern girl cares to exercise her inalienable right to woo a man who attracts her.

Does a proposal of marriage from a woman arouse a man's love for her? Or does it repel and disgust him?

As one humorous philosopher writes: "Every girl always has the right to propose. She also has the right to go fishing with a shotgun—but she won't catch anything."

YOU know, of course, and I know, that the average nice girl would not for an instant dream of proposing marriage. Her problem as a rule is deciding which of the men who wish to marry her she shall accept.

There is the case of Mary, for instance. Three men loved Mary and each of the three would have been supremely honored and blissfully happy had she replied "Yes" to his momentous question. Mary liked Charles and Bob. But when Frank came along—that was different.

"I am serious now," she confided to me. "I have found the man who can make me happy."

Did Mary propose to Frank? Certainly not. She knew the secret—as every clever girl does—of being so attractive, so dainty, so lovable, such good and sympathetic company, that before he realized what happened Frank had proposed to her and they were planning marriage.

NOT every nice girl is beset with admirers. Some girls are shy and it takes time for The Man to find them. But every lovable girl sooner or later, according to the rule of averages, is going to attract the love of a more or less congenial and lovable man. She will not have to propose to him. He will adore her for her gentle modesty and find supreme interest and joy in the effort required to earn and win her love and heart.

Of course, there are exceptions to all rules. If a young man has been taking up all your time for several years and professes to love you, why do you not come to a clear understanding with him?

Universally, man is the born hunter and fighter. And the prize for which he will, if need be, fight to the death is love of the woman who attracts him as his chosen mate.

For this reason the rule of success in the technique of love is to take account of the truth that man, due to inherited instinct and inborn, aggressive strength, thrills to the pursuit and wooing of a woman he loves, and soon despises love offered cheaply.

YOUR inalienable right as a woman, leap year and every year, is to attract and enchant your helpmate. If he truly loves you he will, with the aid of your sympathetic encouragement, propose marriage to you. So you see, you will not need to exert that doubtful Leap Year privilege and right of proposing to him in order to enjoy your birthright of love and successful marriage to the man of your heart.

"WEATHER"—No Such Word in Love's Lexicon

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

LOVE is a "flame." And a flame is ardent and brightly hot. But to burn clear the flame does not necessarily need tropic air around it. It is itself its own heat as love is itself "its own pleasure and pain!" Fuel is all it asks. There is no such word as weather to the flame nor to Love, who is a flame. Fire leaps from a tiny bonfire built upon ice as gayly as it does from the palm fronds heaped upon sand.

The warm hot-house garden of the South, or the snow-garden with its crystal flowers of the North. They are all one to Love. Coming up on the speedy Havana Special, thundering away minute by minute from the ineffable air of the South, where the Gulf wind blows over jasmine and palm, strains its sweetness through the singing, scented harp-strings of the pines, and then says "try me!" rolling minute by minute into more frigid air, you think the fire-bird of Love can only wish to live where the flowers bloom, the sun shines, and the air smells of honey in the sun, all the time!

You forgot that there was Love in New England in the Wintertime!

You forgot that cold red cheeks are sweet to warm red lips. You forgot that John Alden tramped through the Puritan Winter to sit and watch Priscilla spin; with his heart on fire! And it took fire right in the teeth of a bitter cold wind. The airs of Italy and Spain; the orange—and rose perfumed breath of Southern California; the dreaming days and nights of the true South; they have always seemed Love's garden. For they mean guitars; idle hours; always Summer moons; love songs.

But, however far apart the two words "Flame" and "Frigid" may be, the lad who kneels at a girl's feet to put on her skates, his heart a bonfire and his knees in the ice, knows that the two can perfectly preserve their separate characters while in the closest juxtaposition. Can you be a bonfire and icicle at the same time? Cupid in a blizzard says "Oh aye!"

—NELL BRINKLEY.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Abuse of the Stomach an Invitation to Cancer

EVERY eighth man who dies between the ages of 45 and 70 is the victim of cancer. This is the statement of the American Society for Control of Cancer. And, the society adds, every fifth woman who dies between 45 and 65 is claimed by the same dread disease.

DR.COPELAND

It is said there are 300,000 cases of cancer in the United States. In New York City alone are 21,000 cases.

From the statistics gathered by this organization it is concluded that 18 per cent, considerably over one-third of the deaths, are due to stomach cancer. This is the most common and most serious form.

The stomach is the most abused of the organs of the body. Men and women make a plaything of it, or perhaps I should say a playhouse. They are as careless of it as a tiny baby is of its mouth.

You watch a baby a little while and you will decide that the center of gravity lies right there. Everything within reach goes to the infant's mouth. If nothing else is found, the hands go into it.

Nibble, nibble, nibble; guzzle, guzzle, guzzle—the poor stomach does not have an hour to rest. Candy, cake, crackers, sandwiches, nuts; soda water, lemonade, soda pop—you know the story.

Not one of the things I have mentioned is bad for you. But, why make the poor, tired stomach work every minute? Give it a chance!

The stomach is the chief portion of an odd shaped tube running from the lips to the exit of the intestine. This tube is lined with delicate membrane. It is supplied with muscles, nerves and many blood vessels.

There are particular names given to the different portions, but in reality it is one continuous passageway. The stomach sympathizes with and is affected by disturbances in all parts of the route. The stomach cannot be healthy unless the whole digestive tract is healthy.

Slow progress of the waste material through the lower bowel permits the material to ferment. Under such conditions germ life flourishes, gases form and poisons are absorbed by the system. You have no more reason for thinking your stomach can remain normal with this stagnation than you can expect a house to be sanitary if the basement is filled with filthy and fermenting material.

The muscles, nerves and circulation of the stomach cannot be up to par, unless by exercise, fresh air, and sunlight you keep your whole body up to par. Your stomach is a part of your anatomy and linked up with all its other parts.

If you fail to chew your food, bolting it in huge chunks, the rough and irritating materials pass into the stomach to damage its walls and overwork its machinery. You chew splinters of wood and all sorts of indigestible things. What will they do to your stomach walls if you swallow them?

How can you expect the stomach to do otherwise than rebel against excessively hot drinks or deluges of ice water?

Think over these suggestions and see if you cannot bring yourself to reform some of your habits. By so doing you may spare yourself the agonies of indigestion and guard against something worse.

Monday's astrological chart shows conflicting testimonies, with prospect of anxieties and perplexities of a personal as well as business nature. It is advisable to sign papers with great caution and to defer important acts.

Those whose birthdate it is may have a year of problems and perplexities in personal and business affairs. Sign all writings with precaution lest fraud be perpetrated.

A child born on this day may require careful training in all directions to enable it to cope with life's problems discreetly.

Notable Nativity: Walter Damrosch, musical director.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Correspondents are reminded that all letters sent to this department must be written on one side of the paper only, and that no personal replies are ever given.

Tarzana

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl of 15 and in my second year at high school and there is something I should like very much to ask you. How can you stop the attentions of a boy whom you do not care for, but who calls you up every day and even though you hang up on him, continues to annoy you? I have told him I don't like him and I'm not allowed to go with him. I am rather strong for a girl and enjoy sports, especially swimming and tennis, and I like to have races in swimming and play tennis with boys, because boys are good sports. But this love stuff disgusts me. Am I not right? Just

TARZANA.

If this boy annoys you, even though you have told him you dislike him, it is up to your mother or father to answer the telephone for you and order him to stop calling. You are quite right in your attitude toward boys, my dear.

Lovesick

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am lovesick and have written you for advice. I am in love with a boy who is two years older than I am. He is 18 years old. I know I am rather young to be in love, but I am just wild about this boy. He has told several boy friends of his that he loves me and has respect for me because I am no flapper. He knows I do not drink, smoke or care for petting. He tells my girl friends to tell me not to go out with any boys. But yet he doesn't ask me for a date. I have only been out with him about twice. I often wonder if he is just bashful or doesn't care for me. Should I give him up as a friend?

LOVE-SICK.

Just accept matters as they are for a year or so, my dear. He must like you but perhaps thinks you a little young to go out much.

Silvers

DEAR MISS GALE:

We heartily agree with you on the kissing and smoking questions. We are two sensible girls and as yet we have never met, as we call, a "Sir Galahad." Oh, Miss Gale, are there really any sensible, manly, boys in this cruel world? We have studied character of men, but our search is fruitless. We have met "loads and loads" of boys, but they all are in the modern jazz stage; always restless. We would like the men correspondents to make remarks on this letter.

SILVERS.

Of course there are lots of nice boys, my dear. You have just been unfortunate in your acquaintance, that is all.

Symmetry Gained by Dancing

By MARIA JERITZA

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

IT IS natural for human beings to feel and respond to rhythm. The entire universe is seemingly subject to this periodic recurrence of beat and movement, illustrated in the rise and fall of tides, movements of the moon, sun and planets and the motion of waves and wind-stirred leaves.

Persons who are natural find happiness and relief from strain in responding to rhythm of music by dancing. Poetry is rhythm of words. Dancing is rhythm of movements of the body and is truly described as the poetry of motion.

It is hard to imagine a more delightful way of combining natural joy of rhythm with relaxation and needed exercise than dancing affords. Of course, individuals with religious scruples against dancing must find their natural outlet for energy through other forms of exercise.

YOU will not make a mistake either in indulging in the old-fashioned dances which are being revived under the sponsorship of Henry Ford, or in joining a class in modern ballroom dancing under a reliable instructor, provided you dance under favorable conditions. By these I mean that the air of the ballroom should be cool, fresh and free from dust and smoke, and you should be dressed comfortably with a light wrap available between dances.

Rhythmic dancing will develop your entire body to symmetry. The tango and waltz are unexcelled as aids to graceful carriage. The first 10 lessons of ballet work will help any woman, old or young, to grace, poise, freedom of motion and enhanced health and beauty, if she practices persistently.

If you cannot join a class, by all means take private lessons or a correspondence course from a reliable instructor and practice daily to the music of your radio or phonograph.

HERE is a fundamental ballet step, which will bring all the major muscles of your body into play if you do it accurately. In all ballet exercises the knee is held rigid and the movement is controlled by the hip, which is kept constantly in motion.

Stand straight with the heel of your right foot touching your left foot half-way between heel and toe, your toes pointed out slightly. Grasp the back of a chair with your left hand to steady yourself, then kick your right leg in front, to your right and backward, four times, as high as you can. Turn about face and repeat the movement, grasping the chair back with your right hand and kicking with your left leg the same way, 12 times.

It is advisable, of course, if possible, to work under the personal supervision of an instructor, to insure accuracy.

Dancing brings most of the muscles of the body into active play, calls for mental poise and control, is a delightfully enjoyable pastime, and encourages grace, graciousness and courtesy. For these reasons, it is an invaluable aid in the beauty quest.

Neck and Hemlines

The height of irregularity is evidenced by the necklines and hemlines of many of the smartest crepe de chine or satin back crepe tunic frocks. The tunics stress the wrap around effect, with fulness concentrated at one side and drape falling far below the hemline. A surplice closing and triangular neckline is both flattering and smart.

Lost in a Night Fog While Carrying the Mail

"Lindy" Describes the Perils He Faced While on Postal Duty

His entry in the "On to New York" cross continent airplane race was the subject of yesterday's chapter of "We" in the Sun-Telegraph. But Lindbergh was destined not to finish that flight. After numerous delays he quit the competition, located in St. Louis, enlisted in the Missouri National Guard, joining the aviation service, and subsequently became connected with the air mail.

Ice on Propeller Blades

By COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

CHAPTER XXI.

BY THE first of April our organization was well under way, and about a week before the inauguration day we took two planes over the route to make any final arrangements necessary.

On April 15, at 5:50 a. m. I took off from the Air Mail Field at Maywood on the first southbound flight, and that afternoon we sent two ships north with the inauguration mail from St. Louis, Springfield and Peoria.

During the summer months most of our route was covered during daylight, but as Winter approached the hours of night flying increased until darkness set in a few minutes after we left the field at St. Louis.

With night flying and bad weather our troubles began. Our route was not lighted at first and the intermediate airports were small and often in poor condition.

Our weather reports were unreliable and we developed the policy of taking off with the mail whenever local weather conditions permitted. We went as far as we could and if the visibility became too bad we landed and entrained the mail.

One of the worst conditions we met with was in flying from daylight into darkness. It was not difficult to fly along with a 100-foot ceiling in the daytime, but to do so at night was an entirely different matter, and after the night in, if the weather became worse, it was not possible to turn around and return to daylight.

Fog and Sleet Peril

With all of our difficulties, however, the mail went through with surprising regularity. During the first five months of operation we made connections on over 98 per cent of our trips.

There are only two conditions which delay the air mail—fog and sleet. If the fog is light or local, and the sleet not too heavy, the planes continue even then. But when the ground becomes invisible and the fog covers the terminal fields, or when sleet freezes thickly on wings and wires, the planes cannot continue. In such cases the mail is entrained and usually reaches its destination at least as soon as it would have if sent by train in the first place.

Almost every day, in some section of the United States, mail pilots are flying over fog and through storms and rain to bring their ships through on schedule time. The mail plane is seldom delayed and then only by impossible weather conditions.

In the future these delays will become fewer as radio navigation and instruments for blind flying improve, until it will be possible for the pilots to keep to their schedules under the worst conditions and in comparative safety.

The Ice Hazard

Another hazard, during certain times of year, is the formation of ice. This will gather on all parts of the plane but mainly on the wires, propeller, and entering edge of the wings. If it forms slowly from a fog or light rain, a plane may be able to continue on its course for some time, but if a heavy sleet storm is encountered the ice may form so rapidly that a ship cannot stay in the air over five minutes before it is so loaded down that the pilot will be unable to keep from losing altitude even with his motor wide open.

The actual weight of ice is not as important as the loss in efficiency of the wing, due to the changed airfoil caused by ice gathering on the entering edge.

Still, more loss is caused from the ice forming on the propeller itself. The blades take on a thick coating which continues to increase in depth until the ice from one of the blades is thrown off by centrifugal force. When this happens an excessive vibration sets in and continues until the opposite blade has thrown off its coating.

One of the dangers which a mail pilot faces in flying at night through bad weather and low visibility is in suddenly losing track of the ground due to a fog bank lower than the rest. If he has been flying very close to the ground it is not advisable to go lower, and often the only alternative is to climb up through the fog and attempt to find a hole somewhere to spiral down through.

Two Forced Jumps

Being caught in a fog at night was the cause of two of my forced jumps, the official reports of which follow:

"I took-off from Lambert - St. Louis Field at 4:25 p. m., September 16, 1926, and, after an uneventful trip, arrived in Springfield, Ill., at 5:10 p. m., and Peoria, Ill., at 5:55 p. m.

"I left the Peoria Field at 6:10 p. m. There was a light ground haze, but the sky was practically clear with but scattered cumulus clouds. Darkness was encountered about 25 miles northeast of Peoria, and I took up a compass course, checking on the lights of the towns below until a low fog rolled in under me a few miles northeast of Marseilles and the Illinois River.

"The fog extended from the ground up to 600 feet, and, as I was unable to fly under it, I turned back and attempted to drop a flare and land. The flare did not function and I again headed for Maywood (Chicago's air mail port), hoping to find a break in the fog over the field.

"Examination disclosed that the cause of the flare failure was the short length of the release lever and that the flare might still be used by pulling out the release cable.

"I continued on a compass course of 50 degrees until 7:15 p. m., when I saw a dull glow on the top of the fog, indicating a town below. There were several of these light patches on the fog, visible only when looking away from the moon, and I knew them to be towns bordering Maywood.

Lost in the Fog

"At no time, however, was I able to locate the exact position of the field, although I understand that the searchlights were directed upward in an endeavor to attract my attention.

"Several times I descended to the top of the fog, which was 800 to 900 feet high, according to my altimeter. The sky above was clear with the exception of scattered clouds, and the moon and stars were shining brightly. After circling around for 35 minutes I headed west to be sure of clearing Lake Michigan, and in an attempt to pick up one of the lights on the Transcontinental.

"After flying west for 15 minutes and seeing no break I turned southwest, hoping to strike the edge of the fog south of the Illinois River. My engine stopped at 8:20 p. m., and I cut in the reserve.

VARE PINS HOPES ON REVOTE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Senator-Elect William S. Vare, (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, whose senatorial seat is under double jeopardy, will waive all rights to a recount of ballots cast in his 1926 election, it was learned today.

Vare will file a recount waiver with the Senate elections sub-committee, it was said, in an effort to get a final decision on the contest filed against him by William B. Wilson, Democrat, and on the question of excluding him, before February 23. Vare must have the two cases disposed of before that date or he cannot enter the April primaries as a candidate for re-election to the Senate in next November's election.

The Vare strategy, his friends said, will be to hurry the Wilson contest to a decision without presenting any prolonged defense. His associates declared the investigating committee would be unable to find enough errors, deliberate or accidental, to justify throwing out more than a few thousand votes and that Vare's 190,000 majority would insure his election over Wilson.

Unafraid of the outcome of the Wilson contest and resigned to being excluded ultimately by the Senate because of excessive expenditures in his 1926 primary, Vare was described as impatiently awaiting final action on both cases. Once excluded, he will seek vindication before the people of his state, but under Pennsylvania law, the vacancy must exist before February 23, or he cannot be a candidate this year.

The Investigating subcommittee will meet Monday to plan a program of action. It already has been instructed to recount the ballots cast in Allegheny, Philadelphia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Delaware and Schuylkill counties, where Wilson challenged the results. This tabulation probably can be concluded in a couple of weeks if Vare asks no further recounts, thus giving the Senate a chance to act on the question before February 23.

OFFERS DRINK, KILLS SELF

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A scribbled invitation to "have a drink" found on a note for which a half emptied liquor bottle served as a paper weight, was the only message left when Wallace McCutcheon, former British army officer, artist, actor and once husband of Pearl White, the film star, took his life in his hotel room.

The note was found by the police in the same room where McCutcheon's body was discovered yesterday, sprawled across a bed. A pistol lay at his side and there was a bullet hole in his right temple. The police said it was clearly a case of suicide.

IT WAS inevitable that a chapter on black derbies would bring to the office Johnny Black, a reporter when he is not acting as publicity man for a theater or an automobile race. The rage of the black derby in a manner vindicates the judgment of Mr. Black. Many, many years ago when to put on a black derby prompted the question: "Are you getting many laughs with that hat?" Johnny Black wore an iron skimmer. Besides being about the only one downtown, Johnny's was also the smallest in the whole country.

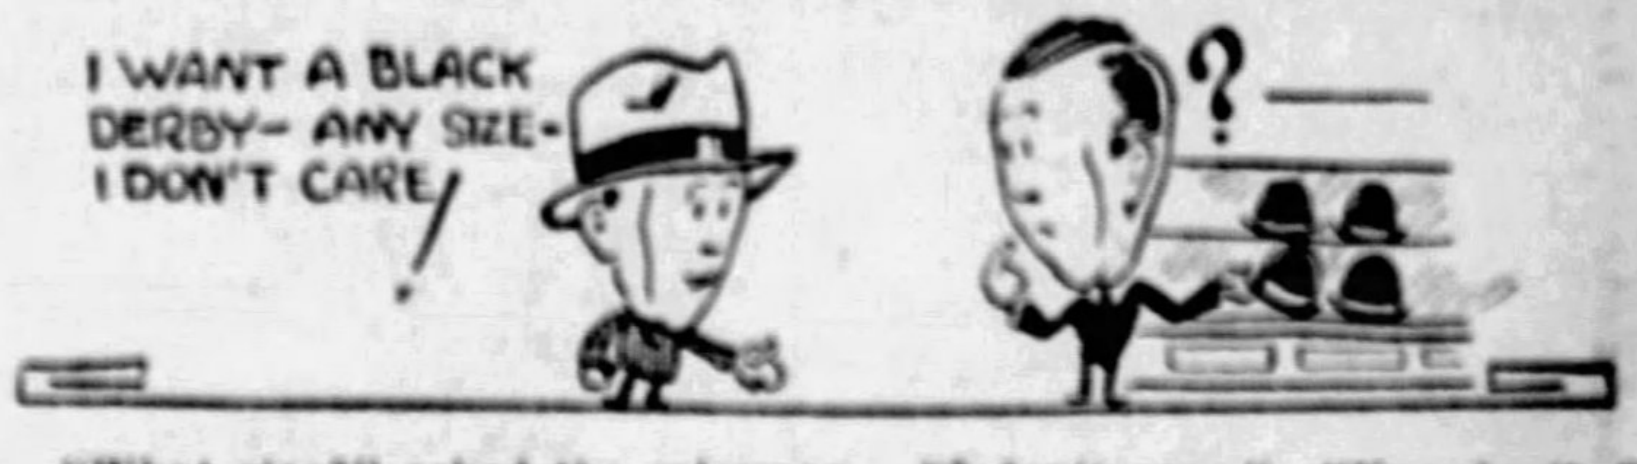
JOHNNY was in a store getting measured for his winter line of black derbies, he says, when another customer walked up to a salesman. "I want to buy a black derby," said the customer.



I WANT A BLACK DERBY—ANY SIZE—I DON'T CARE!

"What size?" asked the salesman. "I don't care." "You don't care what size?" repeated the salesman incredulously. "No, sir," said the customer, "I want it for my cornet."

Not new, but good.

THE old third degree method, once popular in all police circles, is losing favor here and elsewhere. Methods less painful in a physical sense, at least, are employed now to cause the accused to break down and confess.

The old way of allowing the police in charge of the inquisition to take stiff pokes at the jaw of the accused is being supplanted by subtle customs. Often, the accused, especially in a homicide case, is taken to the scene of the crime and there he is forced to watch the police uncover the evidence or to watch while a hypothetical re-enactment of the crime is gone through with. Quite often the accused hides his eyes and shouts: "Nough, I confess," to be relieved of the awful situation.

In the event that the suspect is a dope addict he is left severely alone until he begins craving a "shot." He may then be tempted with a supply to loosen his tongue.

CHINESE restaurants have lost that air of mystery, which, besides the food, first brought them into prominence in this country. Now they are as Americanized as the dining room of the William Penn. It was not always so. There was a time when innocent John Chinaman, setting up to do cooking and serving, was considered just a little circumspectly by the customers. In fact, some years ago it was almost an adventure to go into a Chinese restaurant.

Now, the patrons dance to American tunes by a typical American orchestra, and, but for the complexion of the waiters, the customer would never know he was in anything but an American restaurant.

Our idea of a Chinese restaurant would be a Chinese orchestra, waiters who could not speak a syllable of English (let the guests point on the menu to what they want) and just a little more of pigtails, shirts not tucked in at the belt, sandals, and waiters who mince, with hands up opposite sleeves.

Now and then, too, we should like to have a feminine voice shriek something that would make the blood run cold, the hair tingle on end, and, if it isn't asking too much, a flashing dagger or two.

Drummond Sends Lily Roses; Sadye Finds His Card

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

LILLY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. She marries Pat. Lily tried, and their domestic ship sailed smoother for a few months. One day Lily met SUE CAIN, an old friend, on the street. Sue invited her to a card party. Lily, without funds, went to a store and tried to charge some clothes to her father. She was informed her mother had left word that "Mrs. Patrick France could not charge things to Mr. Lexington." Staley Drummond pays her bills. Lily starts to neglect her home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

AFTER Pat was gone in the morning she would climb back into bed and lie there, with her pretty arms crossed under her head, staring up at the ceiling and wishing that she did not have to get up to do the ironing or whatever was to be done. . . . Wishing that she had a maid to fill her bathtub for her and lay out some fresh, lovely clothes, instead of the old blue bungalow apron that hung over the back of a chair, waiting for her to slip into it and get to work. . . .

She did not write or telephone to Staley to let him know what she was going to do about himself and her. . . . She did not know what she was going to do about anything. She had no plans, nothing but a great dissatisfaction with her life as it was here in the flat.

On the Saturday of that week a florist's boy brought a big bunch of flowers for her from Staley. His card came with it—as if he did not care who saw it and knew that he was sending flowers to her.

Five minutes after the roses came Sadye Jetterson arrived to ask Lily if she and Pat would come to Sunday night supper.

"Where did you get these?" she asked, poking her nose into the mass of dewy pink bloom. "Have you a secret admirer—or what?"

Lily laughed. "What a thing to say, Sadye!" she said. "You've been seeing too many movies lately, and have your head chockful of plots, haven't you?"

Sadye did not answer. She had caught sight of Staley's card lying on the table beside the roses. "Hmmm," said Sadye. "Ho-hum!" Her little eyes snapped.

Before Lily could stop her she had the card in her fingers.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"'MR. STALEY STANWOOD DRUMMOND,'" said Sadye, reading from the card in high triumph. "What an aristocratic name, Lil!"

Lily gritted her teeth. . . . It made her perfectly furious to have Sadye see what was written on the card. And it always set her nerves on edge to hear Sadye call her "Lil." Coming from Sadye's lips, "Lil" sounded so common somehow or other. To Lily, at least.

"Lil, that's the man you were going to marry when you took up with Pat, isn't it?"

Lily nodded grimly. She could have slapped Sadye's face and turned her out of the flat at that moment with great pleasure.

"Hmm," Sadye mused. "Well, he doesn't seem to get over his yen for you, does he?" Her sharp little eyes took in the great bunch of pale pink roses once more. She seemed to be figuring how much they must have cost, in her own mind.

"If I were you, Lil, I certainly would send those roses right straight back to him," she said, nodding her head wisely. "I certainly would—I know Pat France, and I don't believe he'd want his wife to be getting presents from another man, even if it was just a bunch of flowers."

Lily thought guiltily of the bath room shelf, with all the beauty aids that Staley had sent her when she told him she had none. . . . What would Pat say if he knew that the very powder on her straight little nose was the gift of another man—and of Staley Drummond, in particular?

"You know, a married woman can't be too careful," Sadye was saying now. "It takes so little to make people talk—"

"Oh, Sadye, keep quiet!" Lily was exasperated with her. "For heaven's sake, who's going to know whether Staley Drummond sends me flowers or not, unless I tell it—or unless you do!"

Sadye shook her head. "Not me! I'd never tell it—I'm no trouble maker," she said, turning the flashing rings around and around on her fingers. Sadye had lots of jewelry.

"Anything I've got to say I'll say right to your face," she went on, and then she said it:

"I don't know whether you make a business of seeing this man or not"—she waved Staley's card in the air—"but if you do, you're a very foolish girl. Pat worships the ground you walk on, and if he ever had any cause to doubt you it would kill him, I think."

Lily deliberately took the card out of her fingers, tore it up, and threw the pieces down behind the gas logs in the grate.

"I can't keep a man from sending me flowers," she said, and then as she turned around from the mantel-piece a startling thought came to her. . . . Sadye knew more about herself and Staley Drummond than she was letting on! Something in Sadye's face told her so.

"Sadye," she said quickly, "has Florence France said anything to you about me lately?"

Sadye's pink face became more deeply pink, and she began to blink those sharp little eyes of hers.

"Well—"

"Well, what?" asked Lily.

Sadye looked embarrassed. "Well, I've been hearing things," she admitted, and while she was sneaking Lily remembered that Elizabeth Ertz had seen her getting out of Staley's car that first night on Boyle street, in front of the restaurant . . . and, of course, she had told Sadye!

It came to Lily that she would have to make a clean breast of the whole story—or at least what would seem like the whole story to Sadye.

"Sadye, I'm going to tell you something," she began. "I have seen Staley Drummond since I married Pat—but not until very lately. It never would have turned out this way except that I had to have some new clothes and I charged them to my father—and then when my family refused to let me charge them, there was no one for me to go to but Staley, so I did, and that was the end of it."

Sadye gave her a narrow look. "Was that the end of it?" she asked, getting up and pulling on a pair of too-tight kid gloves. "Are you sure?"

Lily flushed—not a bright scarlet flush like Sadye's, but a soft, wild-rose pink, that died away along her cheek, leaving her dead white.

"I said that was the end of it!" she snapped, and got up from her chair to let Sadye know that, so far as she was concerned, this was the end of the visit, too.

"You and Pat will surely come for supper tomorrow night, then?" asked Sadye, taking the hint and getting up. "I'm going to have a nice little crowd in for Welsh rarebit and near-beer, and then we're going to play a lot of wonderful new phonograph records we have—not jazz, you know, but classical stuff. And then I wouldn't be surprised if Pat and Roy got out their saxophones." She laughed.

"Saxophones!" Lily was astounded. "You don't mean to say that Pat France plays a saxophone! Why, he's never mentioned 'saxophone' to me."

Sadye nodded. "Yes, they practice in the garage mostly," she said, and Lily smiled tenderly to herself. It made Pat seem very absurd and boyish and lovable to her—the thought that he had a saxophone, played it and loved it, but was ashamed of it.

"But sometimes they play at our house," Sadye added. "When Elizabeth Ertz is there to help them out on the piano."

Instantly Lily froze. . . . Elizabeth Ertz. The very sound of her name was hateful to her! She could just picture her, sitting at the piano in Sadye's house, mooning over the keys and making baby eyes at Pat as they played together!

"Is Elizabeth Ertz going to be at your house tomorrow night, Sadye?" she asked with surface sweetness, and Sadye said she was.

"Then I won't be—and neither will Pat!" Lily said firmly to herself, as she watched Sadye waddle down the front walk and climb into her car a moment later.

All her love for Pat—all her jealousy—came surging up into her heart as she stood there behind the net curtains of her little living room and thought of The Ertz and Pat and the hours they had spent together learning music—sentimental, mushy music all about "June" and "moon" and "spoon" no doubt, too!

"And then Sadye Jetterson has the cheek to ask her to a party with me and Pat!" she said to herself. "And the brass to tell me I ought not to see Staley when she brings The Ertz and Pat together every time she can!"

She just wished she had thought of that while Sadye was in the house and "bawled" her out for it good and proper! She certainly did!

That night when Pat came home at 10 o'clock, tired and shabby and none too clean after a day in the shop and garage, she was very loving and sweet to him. She kissed him and clung to him, patting him with her hands.

"Darling," she said, "I never know how much I love you until I'm jealous of you."

"Jealous?" asked Pat, too tired to talk about jealousy or love or anything else. He sank into a chair and began to unlace his shoes, yawning as he did it.

"Have you anything to eat in the house?" he asked wearily. "I didn't stop for supper tonight. . . . Just anything will do."

Hurt, Lily went out into the kitchen and made him a sandwich out of rye bread and cold bacon left over from breakfast. It was not a very good sandwich, but Pat ate it hungrily.

"Well, I think I'll turn in," he said when he had finished it and wiped his hands on his handkerchief. Lily had forgotten to bring him a napkin.

He picked up his shoes and rose from his chair.

"Don't you want to know why I'm jealous?" Lily asked him, coquettishly.

He only grinned at her for answer, and took a little roll of bills from his pocket—his week's salary.

He counted out three $5 bills, and handed them to her. "Here's your expense money," he said. "Make it go as far as you can, will you? Another couple of months and this piston ring is going to be selling, I'm pretty sure. But in the meantime we'll have to go on living like a couple of Chinese coolies, honey."

Fifteen dollars. . . . Lily looked at the three bills when he was gone. Then her eyes lifted to the great bunch of roses on the table. . . . They represented much more than $15, she was sure.

What was $15? Why, it was hardly the price of a really good hat!

"And I'm expected to supply 21 meals every week with it—and do a lot of other things besides!" she thought bitterly. "It wouldn't be so bad, but I hardly see my husband. He comes home and goes to bed at night, and that's all I do see of him, practically."

Dicky Swallows Philip Veritzen But Insists on Having Eleanor Lincoln to Dinner

I GASPED—I could not help it—at Dicky's cool suggestion over the telephone that I invite Eleanor Lincoln to the welcome home dinner I was planning for Lillian and Marion when they should arrive at the farmhouse the coming Saturday. Before I realized what I was doing I voiced my astonishment in a quick objection.

"Oh, Dicky, do you think that will do?" I asked anxiously. "This is almost a family affair, always, you know, and neither Lillian nor Marion ever has seen Miss Lincoln while you and I only have met her once."

Dicky ignored all of my protest except one word.

"Of course, then you mean to exclude Mr. Philip Veritzen from this family affair," he said with heavy sarcasm.

I would have given much to recall the objection I had voiced, but in the face of his answer I could do no less than to throw up a barrage.

"I fancy he will exclude himself," I said airily. "Of course, as he is one of Lillian's oldest friends and is driving her down, I cannot very well get out of inviting him. But as I shall tell him that his son, Noel, is also to be one of the dinner guests, I have not much fear of his staying. And I can assure you that Mr. Noel Veritzen if not one of the family, is most anxious to be counted in that relationship."

Dicky's choler is never proof against his sense of the ridiculous. I heard a distinct chuckle over the telephone.

"My word!" he ejaculated. "That will be a cropper for the old skate! Serve him right, too, the obstinate old devil."

I wondered if he received any satisfaction from applying the epithet "old" to Philip Veritzen, and decided that there was real relish in his voice as he voiced his disapproval of my employer. Then he returned to the request he had made.

"You know old Lil wouldn't care if you invited a dozen Lincolns or Washingtons either to the dinner," he said.

"I'm not so sure about that," I retorted, "and do you realize that we will have to have three Lincolns at the dinner? I cannot invite the girl without extending an invitation to her uncle and aunt. We never have seen Mrs Lincoln, and you know as well as I do what sort of figure Eleanor Lincoln's uncle would cut as a dinner guest."

I could not believe my ears. Instead of the angry rejoinder which I expected, Dicky laughed aloud.

"Let me tell you something, old dear," he said, and something in his tone brought back the memory of the night when he had returned from the interview with the red-bearded man and his companion, and had been so filled with suppressed merriment, apparently at some joke upon me which he did not intend to share. "You can extend all the invitations you please to Miss Lincoln's uncle and aunt"—I wondered if I imagined his hesitation before the last three words—"and be very sure of that pleasant old sinecure known as eating your cake and having it, too. They will not come to your dinner, depend upon it, but I am sure Miss Lincoln will if you make your invitation sufficiently cordial, and do not try to sling any of your usual Lady Vere de Vere—stand-offish stuff. But remember, I especially want her here. And I'll promise to keep her so fully occupied that you won't have to worry about entertaining her at all and can devote all your time to dear old Phil."

Housewives Can Buy, But Can They Sell?

If the man of the house were left with the buying of household goods and foods, would the home be run economically?

Mother would say "absolutely no." And father would agree good-naturedly.

The fact is, housewives do know how to buy economically.

But can they sell with equal profit to themselves? How many housewives are wasting space on *"White Elephants" that clutter up the attic, the cellar, the storage closets?

And yet, these same economical housewives know that these articles would be very useful to some "invisible" neighbor.

Maybe these housewives do not know how to market their "White Elephants," do not know how to reach the "invisible audience." Then here's how:

HE'S DONE IT BEFORE AND SAYS HE CAN DO IT AGAIN AND BEAT BIG FIELD FOR $25,000 PRIZE

William H. Busch, of Millvale and formerly of Boston, recently arrived home to remain with his folks, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Busch and seven brothers and sisters, at 307 Evergreen avenue, for a short time before departing for Los Angeles to start in C. C. Pyle's cross-country grind, which starts March 4. While here he is training in Millvale for the event which has drawn a huge entry, including many famous runners of wide reputation, among them the veteran Willie Kohelmainen. Busch is confident he has an edge on the remainder of the field because of the fact that he negotiated the distance last year, familiarizing himself with the conditions and setting a new record of 65 days for walking and running from Los Angeles to New York, the previous mark for the trek having been Edward Payson Weston's walking time of 77 days, 8 hours. Busch is running an average of 15 to 20 miles daily to keep in trim. He will leave about the middle of next week for the coast. Pictures above show him in various strides, furnishing almost a movie of his running action. His sister, Betty, shown with him at the right, is keenly enthusiastic about his prospects. Inset is a picture of Busch taken on his arrival in Pittsburgh last October on his way from the coast to New York. Note the tired, strained look on his face as compared with his appearance in the other pictures. First prize in the Pyle Marathon is $25,000 and young Busch says if he doesn't win it the man who does will have to beat him.

IT'S a tough thing to be the brother or sister or son or husband of some celebrity and try to follow in the footsteps of the kin and attain equal or greater fame. Somebody always is coming along and making comparisons and they generally are not favorable to a struggling youngster trying to scale the heights.

There was Tom Gibbons, for instance. For years he was known as "that kid brother" of Mike Gibbons, and it wasn't until long after Mike had retired from active participation in the ring that Tommy was able to stand on his own feet and gain the recognition that his ability merited. Many thought he was getting by on the reputation of Mike.

YOUNG JAKE SCHAEFER for years was just the son of Old Jake, and he had to develop into the Nemesis of Willie Hoppe before the mob was willing to acclaim him as a billiard champion in his own right.

Young Bob Fitzsimmons might have been a much better fighter than he turned out to be if the critics and fans hadn't always been comparing him with his dad, old Freckled Bob, who held three world titles during his time.

MRS. ZIVIC SHELTERS BRIDE

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Paul Berlenbach, former light heavyweight champion of the ring, has walked out on his Irish bride.

When he kissed her goodbye Thursday morning he said he would return for dinner at their new home in Pelham Manor.

Later that same day she was having tea at the home of a neighbor and friend, Mrs. Jack Zivic, when in walked a man who served her with a notice that Paul had started action to have their marriage annulled.

She went home almost at once, only to find the doors locked and barred against her. Trembling with emotion and cold, possessing but three dollars and few friends in the East, she went back to Mrs. Zivic, who offered her shelter.

Mrs. Berlenbach, who is only 21, was Ann O'Reilly, daughter of a retired real estate operator living in Los Angeles. They were married there last April.

"His parents have stolen Paul's affections," she said last night. "That is the only reason I can

Dukes Trounce St. Francis, 44 to 17; U. P.'s, Bisons Clash Tonight

By JESS CARVER.

EVERYONE connected with the team except Brew Jackson and Chick Davies aided in the 44-17 licking that the Dukes handed old St. Francis last night up on the Bluff. The game was more or less of warm-up encounter for the Dukes, who are prepping seriously for the Conference battle next Tuesday with Westminster.

St. Francis, coached by Wild Bill Donahoe, former Carnegie Tech ace, wasn't in it for a minute, as the Dukes settled down to work early and passed and shot rings about Mister Donahoe's willing but helpless hands. By the end of the first six minutes of play, the Dukes were out in front by 11-4, and then increased this lead somewhat before the half ended, so that when they trotted to the dressing room for the inevitable lecture, delivered by Coach Davies, they had 14 points advantage over the Saints.

Ganzy Benedict's fine work at the foul line and Brud Stephnes' sucker shot baskets gave the Dukes their points. Stephens caged four goals and Benedict dropped in 5 out of 7 fouls. Shields, Saint captain, and Roetzel, guard, garnered the two field goals permitted his team, and they and Smith flipped in five foul points to make the St. Francis 9 points for the first 20 minutes of play.

The second half was just as soft for the locals. After the score had

PLAN COLLEGE OLYMPIC AID

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Plans to unite the colleges and universities of the country solidly in support of a campaign to help finance the 1928 American Olympic team were disclosed last night by Gustavus T. Kirby shortly before his departure on the liner Aquitania for Europe as official American delegate to the Olympic winter sports in Switzerland.

Kirby announced that a preliminary organization already has been set up to enlist this support. No fixed goal has been set, he said, but it will be the aim of college men to raise $100,000, or one-fourth of the amount required to send the American athletes abroad for the international games.

Since the colleges contributed 86 per cent of the 1924 Olympic athletic talent, Kirby pointed out it seems altogether appropriate for them to contribute as much financially as possible. Some institutions in every section of the country will be canvassed.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28. (INS.)—Except for one game, all will be quiet along the Big Ten Basketball front tonight. The solo contest will be staged at the Midway here, between Minnesota and Chicago. Little is known of the Gophers' strength as they have played only two games to date, winning one and losing one. Chicago has won only one game and lost three. Monday night the Gophers tackle Northwestern at Evanston.

Pirate Icemen Hosts To Hub Six Tonight

By CARL W. SHATTO.

IN THE summer, when hockey's lawmakers go into a huddle and when hot air is quite the thing, the present Boston-Pittsburgh ice series is going to provide ammunition for plenty of verbal fire. The reformers, who will renew their demands for bigger nets and smaller goalies, will shed many a tear as they tell how the Pirates and Bruins battled to three successive scoreless deadlocks in the 1927-28 campaign. They will insist that so many draws hurt the game, and they will ask that something be done about it.

And the reformers are not the only ones anxious to learn what can be done about it. At 8:15 o'clock tonight, on Duquesne Garden ice, the Pirates and the Bostonians, the boys hardest hit by the deadlock epidemic, will take the same matter under advisement, and it is not going to cause any weeping and wailing if they vote that somebody score.

After playing through three and one-half hours of hockey without a tally—as have these stalwarts—things have come to such a pass that even a Boston goal will be welcome.

Even as there is no assurance that tonight's game will bring relief to the scoring draught sufferers, however, so is there no assurance that it will not take on the aspect of a scoring orgy. Both the Bucs and the Bruins have been able to score with regularity and frequency against other clubs, and certainly no love has been lost in their battles against each other.

But score or no score, tonight's setto is likely to attract a crowd of no small proportions. Past Boston-Pittsburgh meetings have been replete with fast, rough action and the series of ties has served to accentuate the spirit of rivalry. Because of a wealth of avoirdupois, the Bruins have been advocates of vigorous body checking, and many and painful are the spills to which foemen have been subject as the Hub representatives use their weight to the best advantage.

Tonight, however, the Bruins are likely to receive even as they give, for the Pirates now are much more hefty since Manager Odie Cleghorn started his comeback campaign last Tuesday. Odie tips the beam at about 200 pounds, is an expert stick handler and one of the most experienced campaigners in the circuit. He has announced that he will play against the Bruins, and it is prob-

MONTREAL MAY SIGN TRIS

MONTREAL, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—George Stallings, manager of the Montreal Royals in the International League has discussed with Tris Speaker the possibility of the crack outfielder coming to Montreal and has "found him agreeable," he announced today.

Stallings, once the "Miracle Man" of the Boston Braves, is the first baseball manager to admit that he had entered into direct negotiations with the "Silver Eagle," a star last season with the Washington Senators and former manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Tris was released by Washington when he failed to accept Clark Griffith's offer that he voluntarily reduce the salary of approximately $50,000 paid him last season.

MARY BROWNE, U. S. G. A., WILL MAKE PEACE SOON

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—There are some expectations that Mary K. Browne will soon make her peace with the United States Golf Association.

The executive committee will meet in March for the consideration of the 1928 activities. Up to the present, Miss Browne has not applied for reinstatement.

The understanding is that she will seek to have lifted the bars placed against her due to her activities as a member of the professional tennis troupe of C. C. Pyle.

Last year, the golf association let it be known that she would be eligible for reinstatement after a period of "good conduct" with reference to her professional enterprises. While Miss Browne took part in several sectional golf championships last year, no notice was taken by the golf association, which is concerned chiefly with the major tournaments.

PITCHER REFUSES TO SIGN

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Charley Root, whose fast curves worried many National League batsmen last season, now is worrying his own baseball club, the Chicago Cubs.

Dissatisfied with some proviso in his 1928 contract, Root, ace of the Cubs' pitching staff, has returned the document unsigned. President Veeck refused to discuss the case except to say he was confident the disagreement would be adjusted satisfactorily and that Root would be with the squad when it starts its spring training at Catalina Island next month.

Chicago baseball writers generally are of the opinion that Root wants no recurrence of the heavy mound duty imposed upon him last summer during the Cubs' desperate drive for the pennant and wants that stipulated in the contract.

Root won 26 and lost 15 games last season, but was called to the mound many other times as relief pitcher after but only a day's rest.

President to Keep Out of Service Game Fuss

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—It was stated flatly yesterday at the White House that President Coolidge has taken no part in the dispute between West Point and Annapolis over football regulations.

It was said that the President's interest in the disagreement between the two service institutions was of the most casual nature and his knowledge of the dispute which threatens to prevent their annual football game next fall was confined to what he had seen in the newspapers.

The White House comment was occasioned by a statement in the New York "World" that President Coolidge was ready to see that the game was played.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

IF THE Giants are successful in landing Tris Speaker, Manager McGraw would be in a position to show National League fans an outfield combination most unique. John J. could flash three southpaw throwers in the pasture in Tris, Frank O'Doul and Eddie Roush. Moreover, McGraw could line up six southpaw batters among his gardeners, the other three being righthand throwers. They are, Jimmy Welsh, George Harper and Melvin Ott.

THREE left-hand chuckers in the same outfield would be more novel than effective. A southpaw seems to me manacled to a certain extent when he performs in left field. The right garden appears to be the ideal spot. Paul Waner is offered as Exhibit A. To see Paul cut loose a throw to second or third is to witness one of the pretty sights at Forbes Field, or wherever the Buccos may be playing.

FEW left-hand throwers excel in center field. Speaker and Roush being outstanding exceptions. The slab, first base and right field are the three "naturals" for the boys who cut them loose from the port side.

SPEAKING of the unusual trend in baseball, it is noted that the Giants have sold Pitcher Norman Plitt to the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. Plitt is one of the few athletes of baseball who perform with the aid of eyeglasses. The Pirates have two of these boys in Lee Meadows and Carmen Hill, the Cardinals having the fourth and last spectacled star in George Toporcer.

THE presence of two such stars on the slab staff of one club perhaps is something entirely new to the game. Meadows and Hill are two pitchers who are called on to take their regular turn, not to mention the relief tricks they do. On warm, sultry days they are forced to take time out at intervals to wipe the misty perspiration from their lenses. In the last bitter series with the Cubs in Chicago Hill smashed his "specs" as he de-crews, and his father, Richard A. Glendon.

Glendon, senior, returns to the Naval Academy as head coach this year after an absence of five years. He was succeeded at Navy by his son, who later moved on to Columbia, where his father kept his hand in the game by lending him assistance and advice.

Columbia had a great freshman crew in 1926 and last year its varsity cleaned up at Poughkeepsie.

The Old Man got the credit. The doubting Thomases said that Young Dick never would have accomplished his success without the aid of his dad.

It was the same at Navy, in 1925, when Young Dick turned out a championship crew. The critics said all of his talent had been drilled in the fundamentals by the elder Glendon before the scion of the Glendon family got his hands on them. And, besides, he had the advice of his father to fall back on.

THIS year, Young Dick will be on his own for the first time and will vie with his father at Poughkeepsie.

We shall see what we shall see.

We shall see just how much the kid's dad was or was not responsible for his son's successes.

The dope either will stand up

or it will not.

As it is, the young fellow probably will have to wait until his father dies or passes into complete retirement before he gets the full credit that is due him.

It's a tough life—this being the son of a famous dad.

THERE is general regret that illness has forced the retirement of Jim Marks as head coach of the Kiski football team.

There is only one Jim Marks. Here is a man who never played football, yet knows more inside angles of the game and is a better teacher of it than a great majority of the graduates of the playing ranks. Directing his prep school elevens he produced a winner year after year. In fact, so good were his teams that they had to go out of their class and play big college freshman teams on the order of Pitt, Penn, Penn State, Cornell and Princeton, to get something like fair opposition, and they won most of these battles.

A student of the game, Marks never has been essentially a theorist. His elevens have played hard, sound football and countless have been the stars he developed for college teams.

Marks is a warm personal friend of most of the "major league" college coaches. Pop Warner and Gil Dobie are two of his especial cronies. They always have ranked high in his esteem for their ability.

Jim, the Sage of Saltsburg, is gone from the active coaching ranks, but his teams live on, and it's not a good bet that he won't be back in harness again the moment his health permits.

JOE BUMBERA has gone to his reward. He died suddenly and peacefully in his sleep Wednesday morning and they buried him today.

Pitt will go a long time before it finds a more loyal son, a more ardent rooter, a more enthusiastic supporter of its policies and its athletic teams.

Joe was graduated a pharmacist and was in the drug store business and also sold bonds. But he never let his business interfere with his duties as a faithful alumnus of his alma mater.

ONE had to know Joe to really understand the college man's devotion to alma mater. Everywhere that Pitt teams went, Joe went with them. To the last he played the drum in the Pitt band—and he was graduated 15 years ago!

During the past season he accompanied the Panther eleven to Des Moines, Ia., for the game with Drake, and only pressure of business prevented him from going to the Coast at his own expense to whoop up things at the Leland Stanford game in the Tournament of Roses.

Joe is survived by his widow and four small children.

think of for his acting as he has. They did not like it when he married me. He left them to set up our home and they thought they would lose most of the fortune he had made fighting. They must have convinced him that I married him for his money. They were talking that way to everybody and had people calling me a 'gold digger.'

"Paul did make hundreds of thousands fighting, but I'd love him just the same if he didn't have a cent. I even got him to stop fighting. His parents didn't like that either. They wanted him to keep on and make more money.

"Paul has been growing cold of late. On Wednesday night he was angry about something. I suppose he had already made arrangements with his lawyer to sue me. I never expected anything like this."

Mrs. Berlenbach has retained Max D. Steuer to represent her.

Local Heavy Gets Chance

SANDY SEIFERT, North Side heavyweight, has been matched to box the veteran Battling Levinsky of Philadelphia in the main bout of 10 rounds at the ring show to be staged at Motor Square Garden February 6.

This was learned last night, Manager John Hernon of the Garden announcing that he had signed Seifert to meet the former light-heavyweight champion in the place of Jack Delaney, who is unable to fill the date here next week.

The show a week from Monday will be the first in three weeks at the East End arena, the Auto Show having put the kibosh on the fight game here for that length of time. In matching Seifert and Levinsky, the Garden management has carded a fine match to mark the resumption of ring activities at Motor Square.

Two Steel Mill Workers to Bid For Olympics

GARY, Ind., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—First Joie Ray, and now another Gary steel mill worker hopes to win a berth on America's 1928 Olympic team. He is Richard Sturtridge, former Depauw University track star.

Sturtridge, a figure in the decathlon at three success Penn and Illini relays, has been working in the steel mills since he was graduated from Depauw last spring. On April 1, he plans to go into intensive training under the direction of Coach Steve Farrell, of the University of Michigan. He says he is in excellent condition.

Joie Ray, one of America's greatest milers, who has been working in the same mills since shortly after his retirement from amateur sports two years ago, also is training vigorously for the Olympics team.

KAYOS FEATURE BOUTS AT NORTH SIDE SMOKER

Five amateur bouts and music featured the initial smoker held by the Harry Greb Club, of the North Side in their hall on Federal street, last night. The show came through with the usual knockouts, with Freddie Mastrean stopping Howard Watkins, Negro welterweight, in the second round of their scheduled three-round fight and Bob Smoller, of the North Side winning on a technical knockout over Chuck Caelio, in the first stanza. Referee Joe Keally stopped the fight when Caelio dropped to the floor for the second time.

Stanley Phillips, hard-hitting North Side welterweight, was to appear on the card against Dixie Delmer, Negro middleweight, but Delmer failed to report.

In the 160-pound class, Jimmy Rooney, of Pitt and a member of the Greb Club, defeated Billy Deasy, Pittsburgh Lyceum, in three rounds.

MULDOON AND FARLEY RETURNED TO BOARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—James A. Farley and William Muldoon have been reappointed to serve as members of the State Athletic Commission by Gov. Alfred E. Smith yesterday. George Brower, the third member of the board, was a hold-over.

The appointment of Farley and Muldoon will extend over a period of two years, beginning January 1 last. Robert Moses, secretary of state, announced the reappointment of the two with the approval of Gov. Smith.

Muldoon has served on the commission since its creation in 1920. Farley was first named in 1924. Under the state government's last reorganization the commission became a division of the Department of State, with the secretary of that department having the appointive power.

BOBBY JONES MAY LEAD WALKER CUP STARS

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The New York American today says that Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, is to be elected captain of the American Walker Cup Team, succeeding Bob Gardner of Chicago, who resigned.

Jones, says the American, will be designated for captaincy by his colleagues on the executive committee of the United States Golf Association. The Walker Cup matches are to be played this year in Chicago against British amateurs.

SOCCER NEWS

by TOM BIRKS

GAME TODAY.
NATIONAL AMATEUR CUP.
Harmarville at U. S. S. Swissvale.

ONLY one soccer game will be staged in the district today. It should prove a good game, for it will find Bobby Robinson bringing his Harmarville Whippets to Swissvale to meet the Union Switch crowd. Seeing that the teams come from rival leagues it is hard to get a line on the outcome of the game. However both outfits are out of the league race and all other competitions so they might as well make a grandstand play at keeping in the amateur with a chance of meeting Heidelberg.

Swissvale started out at the beginning of the season with a chance to cop one of the major tournaments, the team has not been very fortunate and this is the last remaining event for the Switch boys to make a showing. Followers of the District League club feel that it can take the measure of the upriver club despite the presence of Murray, who is fast becoming one of the best backs in the district. The game will start at 3 p. m. sharp and will be played at the Church street grounds.

Secretary Frank Hulet of the West Penn Valley Referees' Association informs us that an important meeting of the association will be held at the usual place this evening at 8 p. m. This has not been a bad season for the knights of the whistle and they are on the right side of the ledger for the first time in two years. President Brown has something to offer to the members so all should be on hand at the appointed time.

One of the best games scheduled tomorrow will find the Corinthians meeting the German Club at West View. The home club has a good following and a good crowd should be on hand.

Burton, star fullback of the American-Hungarians, of Cleveland, and classed as the best soccer player that ever left Canada gave Haist, the German Club outside left a wonderful boost during the week. "Haist is without a doubt the fastest and cleverest wingman I have ever played against" stated Burton. "His speed is tremendous and when he is past a fullback there is no chance in the world of recovering."

This is indeed praise from Burton. The writer has seen the Ohio star on numerous occasions, and any man that can leave him behind must show speed.

SUIT AGAINST M'GRAW DISMISSED BY COURT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Dismissal of a suit for $21,700, brought against John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, by the late Edward R. Thomas, newspaper publisher, has been upheld by the appellate division of the Supreme Court.

The complaint had charged that Thomas was damaged by McGraw's alleged failure to keep an agreement in connection with a real estate transaction involving the purchase of property at Sarasota, Fla., where the Giants have winter training quarters. Supreme Court Justice Walsh previously ordered the suit dismissed and an appeal was taken from that decision.

JERSEY CITY EXPECTS TO SIGN GILHOOLEY

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 28.—(INS.)—Officials of the Jersey City International League Baseball Team expect to sign Frank Gilhooley, former star of the New York Yankees, as player-manager for 1928 within a few days. Gilhooley played with Rochester last season.

CUBA SENDS ENTRY TO DAVIS CUP PLAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Cuba has entered the 1928 Davis Cup competition, challenging in the American zone.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association was advised yesterday by Cuban authorities that the entry had been cabled to Paris.

Bambino in for 'Big' Year—Weighs 240

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. — "Salvaging the Wreck of Babe Ruth" was the title of a learned treatise propounded a year ago in a glow of self-satisfaction by Professor Arthur A. McGovern, the big and little biceps man who takes them and breaks them to his will.

Today, it seemed possible that Mr. B. Ruth might be going about the business of wrecking the salvage. Mr. Ruth, who can gain weight by chewing a stick of gum, hasn't so much as glanced at a medicine ball or taken a dumbell in hand, at least the inanimate kind, since December.

The story now in circulation is that the Babe is in for a big year; that, in fact, he can't miss. Any gent, weighing more than 240 pounds with the season only two months away, just couldn't have any other kind, it seems.

That figure, anyhow, was the conservative venture at Ruth's poundage today by a man far from inexpert in matters of this degree. It means that the boy friend looks considerably like the rotund Ruth of 1925, who came North from spring training in the comfortable folds of a stretcher. They rolled him down the runway of the Pennsylvania Station, hefted him tenderly into a waiting ambulance and off he sped, feet first, into that nether world beyond the cloistered silences of the receiving ward.

WASHINGTON COUNTY CLUB NAMES OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 28.—President David W. Craft, recently elected, announced a completion of the organization of the Washington County Golf and Country Club by the board of directors as follows:

Vice president, William Reese, Canonsburg; secretary, Carl D. Schultz, Washington; treasurer, John C. Hart, Washington.

President Craft also announced that Prof. M. A. Dickie of the Washington and Jefferson College faculty and coach of the W. & J. tennis team, one of the leading golfers in this district, as chairman of the greens committee to succeed the late Clarence E. Penn.

Mrs. Harry M. Thompson was named chairman of the women's house committee and Mrs. H. A. Sytzama chairman of the women's golf committee.

Clarence Shakespeare, recently of Uniontown, elected Washington Club "pro" in place of Harry Keillor, who has gone to Monongahela, will come to Washington in a few days, it was stated.

TOBIN FREE AGENT

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—(INS.)—Little Johnny Tobin, once the speed king of the American League and for the past few seasons an outfielder for the Red Sox, was a free agent today. The veteran, who makes his home in St. Louis, and who has indicated his desire to quit the game and go into business, was given his unconditional release by President Robert Quinn.

George Wright Sports Pioneer, Now 81

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Eighteen holes of golf held no terrors today for a sportsman who was playing a vigorous game of cricket on Boston commons while enlistment for the civil war proceeded in Tremont Temple nearby.

George Wright, pioneer in the sporting goods business, member of the original Cincinnati Reds' baseball team of 65 years ago, first New England exponent of golf and frequently referred to as the father of golf in America, celebrated his eighty-first birthday today by including 18 holes on the links in his festivities.

Joining him were 10 other members of the Old Guard Society, membership in which is limited to those on the shady side of 70 years. This was the third successive year these veterans have thus celebrated Mr. Wright's anniversary.

Tonight Mr. Wright was invited as the honor guest to a dinner given by Benjamin Rosenthal of Chicago, at Royal Ponciana Hotel, where prizes for the golf winners of the day will be presented.

JACK AND TOM POST CASH

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Jack Delaney, retired light heavyweight champion, and Tom Heeney, New Zealand heavyweight, each posted certified checks of $5,000 with the New York state athletic commission yesterday for their 15-round bout March 1 at Madison Square Garden.

The checks were posted in accordance with the new ruling made by the commission demanding a $5,000 guarantee of appearance by fighters involved in major bouts.

The commission announced that if either Delaney or Heeney failed to compete March 1 and could not provide a suitable excuse the $5,000 check of the offending boxer would be split evenly between the promoter and the opponent of the fighter failing to put in an appearance.

Joe Glick, Brooklyn lightweight, was reinstated by the commission effective February 6. Glick was suspended two months ago for fouling Tod Morgan of Seattle, junior lightweight champion, in a title match at Madison Square Garden.

Loren Murchison Not to Compete For Olympics

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Loren Murchison, world record holding sprinter, who was confined recently in a Decatur (Ill.) hospital following an attack of spinal meningitis, will be unable to train for the Olympic trials this summer, he said today.

Murchison is convalescing at the home of his father here. His doctors have pronounced him "sound as a dollar," but he is still weak and underweight.

"The main thing on my mind right now is to get well," he said. "I may indulge in a little indoor work in the fall, but there is not a chance that I will attempt any serious training this year."

The sprinter's weight fell from 155 to 115 pounds as the result of the illness, but he succeeded in tipping the scales today at 135 pounds.

GOLDENSONS DEFEATED IN BENEFIT CONTEST

The Goldensons, former P. and O. League representatives from the South Side, were defeated by a rather decisive margin in the benefit game last night with an all-star team from the Philadelphia Company League, the all-stars winning by a 40-25 score.

The Goldensons got away to a good start, but the All-Stars soon got working and led by Hartman, Robertson and Staiger, soon pulled ahead and remained in the lead throughout the contest. The score at half time was 20-13.

Hartman sunk five field goals, with Robertson and Staiger getting four. The lineup:

ALL-STARS—40.		GOLDENSON—25.
Robb	F	Jesko
Horsen	F	Meade
Robertson	C	Ketchell
Hartman	G	Tecky
Staiger	G	Clarke

livered the ball. Meadows has had many pairs broken while in action.

TOPORCER holds a remarkable distinction in that he is an infielder. In touching runners, the majority of whom slide feet first, the Redbird is in a very dangerous position. Fortunately he has come through without any injuries. While an infielder wearing glasses seems to be taking a risk, it is no pleasant assignment to be serving "rabbit" balls to hard hitters with or without glasses. It is quite remarkable that the game has been so free of accidents like those occurring when a batter drives a hard liner or grounder back at a pitcher.

Lott as the defending champion fought his way into the final play yesterday by eliminating Percy L. Kynaston of New York, 2-6, 6-4, 6-6 and 6-1. In the other section of the semi-final clash, Shields vanquished the single Dominion survivor, Jack Wright of Montreal by 2-6, 6-3, 1-6, 9-7, 6-4.

been made prohibitively one-sided, Davies removed his regulars and inserted his second string men, and then, later on, shoved in the entire squad—not at one time, of course, but he gave all of the boys a workout.

Ganzy Benedict took the lead in the scoring by sinking no less than than four field goals, for an evening's total of 13 points. Rosenberg, Stephens, Vernon, Lesman and Lubic also contributed to the Duke total.

A lad named Sullivan, who must be Irish, made an effort to keep the Saints in the game single-handed in the second period, by caging three field goals and foul point for seven of the eight points registered by the visiting collegians from Loretto. The rest of the Saint club might as well have been handcuffed. In fact, they usualy were.

Tonight, Westminster will endeavor to strengthen its Conference position and remain tied with the Dukes by meeting Bethany at New Wilmington. The U. P.'s and the Bisons were to have played last night, but Bethany decided to play Thiel at Greenville last evening and end the invasion of Pennsylvania tonight with the Blue and White.

Westminster has a veteran team, generally conceded to have as good a chance as any five in the circuit to give Pitt a run for the district honors. It is unfortunate that the two teams do not clash this year. However, should Pitt happen to lose to a sectional varsity, Westminster may be able to finish ahead of the Panthers in the percentage column.

Tonight's game will be the first home test of the year for Westminster. So far, they have defeated both Geneva and Thiel on their own court, in addition to having thumped Allegheny at Meadville and lost to Grove City at Grove City.

SHOTS and PASSES

by Julius Levin

THE Enoch Rauh Club of the Allegheny County League faces its hardest test of the season tonight when it invades the Tube City to clash with the McKeesport Cyclers.

The Tube City quintet is composed of former members of the Pittsburgh Morrys, last year's Central Professional League, and has been meeting with unusual success in local professional circles.

The Cyclers scored seven successive victories until they suffered the first and only defeat of the season last Saturday at the hands of the Philadelphia American League team.

The Rauhs are big favorites in McKeesport and Manager Lefty Saunders is expecting a capacity turnout at the Y. M. C. A.

Tuesday night the Rauhs resume their County League schedule when they oppose the Goose Goslins with Sticks Monohan and Roy O'Donovan in the lineup, at Columbus Temple.

THE Reliance Life team, recently admitted to the Pittsburgh & Ohio Valley League, will entertain the E. P. Junkers of McKeesport in a league contest on the Ingram High School floor.

The Reliance quintet has been having a little trouble getting its bearings in the P. & O. League, but once it strikes its natural stride it is going to prove a tough club to stop.

Opposing the Junkers tonight will be two former Crafton High School favorites, Sky Twyman and Art Montgomery, as well as Chick Hood, one-time Penn State star.

THE Young Men's Hebrew Association will be the mecca for followers of amateur basketball tonight when the varsity and reserve teams begin their fight for the A. A. U. championships.

The varsity quintet is scheduled to meet the Springdale Amicus while the reserves clash with the Harmony Club of the Metropolitan League. Both games bring together evenly matched teams and indications are that both will prove nip-and-tuck battles.

Besides the two elimination games, the Young Women's Hebrew Association girls will oppose the Tumblers.

DRIBBLES

The North United Presbyterian Church team is setting the pace in the Allegheny Y. M. C. A. Church League with three victories and no defeats.

The Philadelphia Company girls are eagerly awaiting their battle with the Loeffler girls next Monday night on the Fifth Avenue High School floor in the preliminary to the Duquesne Light - Pittsburgh Railways game.

West View Junior High School is making an excellent showing in basketball this winter, this team having won every game played so far. Included among its victims is the crack South Hills Juniors.

St. Josaphats Lyceum desires to book games at home and abroad with junior and light first-class teams. Call Hemlock 1338 and ask for Al.

The Orioles of Duquesne would like to arrange games with teams in the boys' class. Red McMahan Club, I. K. S. and others in this class call Duquesne 6483 and ask for Chick.

The Toronto (O.) Tigers, sponsored by the same officials backing the football team of that name, have one of the strongest first-class teams in the Buckeye State and are ready to book games at home and abroad. Teams desiring this attraction write Paul Feeney, Box No. 8, Toronto, O.

The Panther basketball team is open for games with midget teams. Call Hemlock 2571-M and ask for Bill.

The Osceola Club is setting a fast pace in junior ranks this season having scored 22 victories in 2 games played to date. Teams desiring games with this club call Federal 0243-R and ask for Kliff.

Bank Rate Rise a Warning! Durant Talks; Giannina Acts.

By B. C. FORBES

VERY significant is the raising of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank's rediscount rate. Two weeks ago the intimation was made in this column that the Federal Reserve authorities frowned upon the expansion of Wall street loans and that corrective measures were under consideration.

Now a 4 per cent rediscount rate at Chicago, or elsewhere, is far from being abnormally high. Indeed, a 4 per cent rate should be low enough to satisfy the business world.

But the very fact that the Federal Reserve Board sanctioned the change must be interpreted as a very plain warning to stock market speculators that their mounting borrowing is condemned by the powers that be. Of course, action by Chicago is a much less serious matter to stock market operators than were similar action taken in New York.

My guess is that several other Federal Reserve banks, notably in the South and Middle West, will follow suit, and that action will be deferred in New York until it becomes clear whether loan expansion is to continue or cease.

THE writer sees no reason to change his advice to deal cautiously in stocks which have been spectacularly boomed. It is proverbially better to buy stocks when they are low than when they are high.

W. C. Durant is out with a statement to Durant Motor stockholders in the form of an illustrated booklet, "Back on the Job." The front page says "This printing, 1,000,000 copies." Mr. Durant declares that since April 7 he has divided his time, "18 hours a day, between Durant dealers in the field and the Durant factory at Elizabeth, N. J."

Mr. Durant complains that "worthless securities that have no market value" are being traded for Durant stock, and that as a result his stock "is selling far below its real value," and that if this activity ceases, "the market situation will be greatly improved."

Mr. Durant should very plainly understand that many of his stockholders have utterly lost faith in his statements and that what they want now is not words, but action. He should be aware that the "sensational statement" which he widely advertised long ago has thus far proved a dud in the eyes of his own stockholders and others.

For the sake of the hundreds of thousands who were induced to buy Durant Motors stock, a policy which was warned against repeatedly in this column, it is earnestly to be hoped that Durant will succeed in achieving something of a comeback.

I HAVE just had a very encouraging interview on conditions with one of America's foremost industrialists and hope to give the gist of it in this column within a day or two.

Another Carnegie has arisen in America, another man who, at least, shares Andrew Carnegie's determination not to die disgracefully rich.

This man is A. P. Giannini, the once penniless California lad, who is today head of the fourth largest bank in America, the Bank of Italy, which he founded. Years ago Mr. Giannini said to me: "I am not a millionaire and I don't want ever to be a millionaire." But the various financial institutions he has organized have been making so much money during recent years that it has become quite a job for Mr. Giannini to keep his possessions under the million mark.

His share of the profits of one of his enterprises, the Bancitaly Corporation, for last year was $1,500,000, representing one-twentieth of the total. Mr. Giannini promptly turned the whole sum over to the University of California for agricultural research and similar work. He is particularly interested in agriculture because his first job was in the fruit and vegetable business, a job which called him out of bed around 4 o'clock every morning while he was still a tiny schoolboy.

Some of Giannini's go-getting financial methods have been criticised by certain conservative bankers. Certainly nobody can criticise his generosity, his attitude towards personal money making.

May this species of millionaire increase!

CANDIDATE HOOVER'S stock is rising notably. So is Gov. Smith's. Vice President Dawes, it is whispered in influential circles, will come prominently to the front by and by. All others are considered as out of the running at present. Finance and business view the campaign calmly.

PRICES UNEVEN AT MARKET OPENING

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Uneven price movements characterized the opening of today's stock market. Resumption of bullish demonstrations in the public utilities was featured by an initial jump of 4 points in Laclede Gas and the establishment of a new high record by Montana Power around $150 a share. Sharp gains in Warren Bros. and American Linseed were offset by declines of 1 to 2½ points in Canadian Pacific, Air Reduction, Woolworth and A. M. Byers.

Speculators for the advance quickly regained control of the price movement despite signs of increasing heaviness in some of the standard industrials. Pool specialties continued to attract the bulk of the buying power. Coty, American Zinc preferred and Abitibi Power all moved up 2 to 3 points before the end of the first half hour. Active bidding for Hudson Motors was associated with reports that William C. Durant was again active in that stock. U. S. Leather A advanced to another new peak in reflection of improving trade conditions. Canadian Pacific extended its loss to nearly 4 points and U. S. Steel common, Houston Oil and International Nickel sold down a point or so. Profit-taking sales increased in volume as trading progressed, retarding the upward movement. Foreign exchanges opened steady with sterling cables quoted around $4.87 5-16.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened easy today at a decline of 21 to 27 points under heavy general selling promoted by weak Liverpool cables and unfavorable trade advices.

Active months sold 23 to 32 points net lower, May declining to 17.72c and October to 17.35c, or 193 to 223 points below the high prices touched on the advance late last month. Active covering and trade buying at these prices steadied the market and caused rallies of 8 or 10 points from the lowest, but selling continued and the bulges were not fully maintained.

Private cables attributed the decline in Liverpool to general liquidation because of pessimistic advices from the Manchester goods market. Curtailment of production, it was said, was being considered in the American spinning section.

BOBS TO CELEBRATE HER 104TH BIRTHDAY

At her winter home in St. Petersburg, Fla., Mrs. Catherine Fenton, of Jamestown, N. Y., celebrated her one hundred and fourth birthday anniversary by having her hair bobbed.

METAL SHARES ARE ACTIVE

Trading continued rather narrow in Fourth avenue today, sales during the first hour being confined to few issues such as United Engineering and Foundry, Carnegie Metals, Arkansas Gas, Lone Star Gas and Fireproofing.

Carnegie Metals has been the best seller all week, thousands of shares changing hands, with considerable buying coming from the East. Every effort to depress the stock during the week has met resistance.

Arkansas Gas has not been dealt in to any great extent all week. Details of the merger involving that issue are expected to be announced in a few days.

SEWAGE TURNED INTO HOUSE GAS IN GERMANY

By a new process sewage and similar wastes are being converted into gas for household use in Germany. Enough gas for the domestic supply of a population of 5,000 is being produced from sewage at Gross Zieter.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Bell Telephone to Make Improvements.

The directors of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania approved expenditures for new construction amounting to $1,506,693. A large portion of this money will be used in erecting new storm proof cable lines in various sections of the state. This is the first expenditure out of the 1928 budget in which provision was made for appropriation of $25,578,000.

75,386 New Freight Cars Installed.

A total of 75,386 freight cars was installed in service during 1927 by the Class 1 railroads. This was 18,611 cars fewer than those installed in 1926 and 53,036 cars fewer than in 1925. Box cars numbered 35,310, coal cars, 29,045, and refrigerator cars, 6,019. These figures were released by the car service division of the American Railway Association.

Brooklyn Transit Outlook.

Negotiations between Samuel Untermyer, special counsel for the Transit Commission, and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation, which have been in progress several weeks, have reached the point where the price which the city should pay to acquire the Brooklyn lines is under consideration. A committee of six engineers met with Mr. Untermyer at the Transit Commission's offices yesterday for the first of a series of conferences to fix the price.

To Curb Anthracite Monopoly.

Senator Brookhart (Rep.), Iowa, in a bill he introduced, proposes that the government "prevent the monopoly in the production, transportation and sale of anthracite coal" by taking over some of coal lands and railroads necessary to market the coal. The lands would be leased to operators of mines under direction of a Federal Coal Commission, which the bill would establish.

The American Petroleum Institute estimates that the daily average gross crude oil production in the United States for the week ended January 21 was 2,380,800 barrels as compared with 2,373,300 barrels for the preceding week, an increase of 7,500 barrels. The daily average production east of California was 1,164,300 barrels, as compared with 1,157,100 barrels, an increase of 6,200 barrels.

Merger Tendency Continues.

The tentative announcement of plans which will bring about the consolidation of Industrial Alcohol with Air Reduction is only one of a number of developments of the same sort which are now evidently in sight, such as the extensive steel combinations in the Youngstown district which are under way. An important motor wheel merger is projected and combinations are likely to occur in other directions in the automobile field, although the wheel combination already referred to is likely to be the earliest. An interesting development has been the steady penetration of the German I. G. Farbenindustrie Company into the American chemical trade. It has already obtained stock in a considerable number of chemical concerns, and as is now publicly announced has entered the field of photographic supplies by obtaining control of one of the principal competitors of the Eastman Kodak Company. If present indications bear fruit, the year 1928 may be quite as important in the field of industrial mergers and foreign penetration as it is in that of rail combinations.—Henry Clews & Co.

Washington. — Business during the week ended January 21 was "considerably higher" than in the same week of 1927, as indicated by figures covering check payments, the Commerce Department announced today. The volume, measured by the same yardstick, was smaller than in the preceding week, according to the department.

Numerous Stocks Cornered.

Broadan Wall in his review of yesterday's New York market says in part: "The rise of Byers and the other technical cornered stocks wiped out practically all semblance of a free and open market in the shares. Anaconda Copper interests were reputedly in control of the market for both Greene Cananea and Montana Power. Expecting that the money conditions would influence reaction in the issues that have been the outstanding leaders in recent trading, professionals have been selling short for the last fortnight. Those in control of the market give them no chance to cover. Byers control reputedly rests in the hands of Pittsburgh interests, who first took an active stock market position almost a year ago. The more sensational the manipulation in these stocks the more determined the money powers are to curb speculation."

Penn Mex Fuel.

Penn Mex Fuel Company had greater success in its 1927 drilling operations in Mexico than any company in the republic. Not only were six of its eight attempts successful, but its new production should make it Mexico's greatest light oil producer in 1928. Early in the year it found an extension of the Alamo pool into Paseo Real, obtaining an estimated daily production of 48,000 barrels from five wells, and on January 4, it completed its sixth well in Paseo Real for an additional 10,000 barrels daily flow. Daily withdrawals in December averaged 23,550 barrels, which should increase to not less than 35,000 barrels. During December, company resumed exporting from its Tuxpam terminal after a lapse of more than two years.

U. S. Steel Profits Slump.

According to latest estimates the United States Steel Corporation failed to earn its dividend in full in the closing quarter of 1927. United States Steel requires $12,453,411 quarterly for common and $6,304,919 for preferred dividend, a total of $18,758,330. In the third quarter Steel earned net for stock $21,583,425, or $2.14 a common share after deducting preferred payments. It now seems probable that net for common will not much exceed $1.50 a share in the last quarter. As earnings for the nine months were $7.74 a common share, net for the year may be estimated at around $9.25 a share on the 7,116,235 common shares. Earlier estimates had placed Steel's last quarter showing at close to $19,000,000 net for stock, or about sufficient to cover the dividends.

Du Pont de Nemours Profits Gain.

The annual report of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. for the year 1927, issued today, shows income of $41,113,968, or $15.45 a share, applicable to the no par common stock outstanding at the end of the year. This compares with $37,193,164, or $12.98 a share in 1926. The net income after deduction for Federal income tax and interest on funded debt and before deducting $4,832,864 for dividends on the debenture stock was $45,947,832, equal to 9.5 times the debenture dividend requirements for the year. The financial statement reports income of $16,577,694 from operations, including equity in earnings of directly controlled companies and $30,565,001 from investments, of which $28,941,597 was from the investment in General Motors, which compare with the 1926 figures of $14,805,724 from operations and $29,511,947 from investments, of which $23,621,946 was from the investment in General Motors. Total current assets, as of December 31, amounted to $70,529,985, which included $17,512,-171 cash. Liabilities totaled $8,168,904.

Brokerage Loans Rise Slowly.

Considerable hue and cry over the volume of brokerage loans has arisen during recent weeks, even resulting in an unprecedented statement of reassurance from the White House, says the February issue of Moore, Leonard & Lynch's Graphic Market Review. Most of the alarmist views concerning these brokerage loans, however, fail to consider that it is the relative rather than the actual size of such loans which is significant. Actually regarded, the recent volume of loans for stock market purposes has appeared large. When seen in their proper relative light, however, they have not appeared to be at a dangerously high level. In actual volume, December brokerage loans amounted to only 4.52 per cent of all exchange listings in value and to only 5.43 per cent of total stock values. Both of these percentages are smaller than those evident two years ago.

Chicago Bank Rate Raise Important.

Raising of the discount rate by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago was easily the most important financial development of the week, but in view of recently arising conditions the action of the directors was by no means surprising. It is remembered, of course, that Chicago was the last of the Federal Reserve banks to put into effect the 3½ per cent rate which has prevailed in the entire system since last summer. It is also recalled that the last previous change at Chicago was accompanied by considerable discussion as to the powers of the Federal Reserve Board in the question of forcing changes at the various centers. On the occasion of Chicago's reduction from the 4 per cent to the 3½ per cent figure last August there was a hearty opposition from many financial men in the mid-western metropolis as well as from sources in the east which held the opinion that the rights of the individual banks in relation of discount rates should be held inviolate. While the dissension arising out of the former change eventually passed away, to all appearances, the opinion remained that the Chicago institution would restore the 4 per cent rate as soon as such step could be taken.—A. E. Masten & Co.

Our Export Automobile Trade.

"Those who are concerned for the future of the American automobile industry should remember that there is an enormous export market only at the beginning of its development," states the Index, published by the New York Trust Company. "For the first 11 months of 1927 export of American cars and trucks numbered 360,130 units with a value of $319,070,000. This represents an increase of 21 per cent over the number in the same period in 1926 and is 11 per cent of the total production as compared with 6.1 per cent last year. Australia and Argentina are the two leading markets for American cars, but even in Europe the United States is steadily increasing its sales. [illegible] 10 per cent of all the cars outside of this country are of American manufacture."

MAKE DETECTIVES BULLET PROOF

The county commissioners have taken steps to make detecting a little more safe for detectives. Yesterday they appropriated $600 for bulletproof vests for county detectives, and additional money for tear gas bombs, high powered rifles, ammunition, and automobiles, for the sleuths.

District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner and Detective Chief George Murren approved the proposal of Commissioner Charles C. McGovern for an undercover secret service department, under Chief Murren, to procure evidence in the increasingly frequent gang murders. The Commission asked $10,000 for this department, and $10,000 for rewards to citizens enabling apprehension and conviction of murderers. No action was taken on either suggestion.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Indications of brisk export demand for corn gave firmness early to the corn market today, despite ideal conditions for movement of the corn crop. Dry cold weather tended simultaneously to strengthen wheat values. Starting unchanged to ⅛c off, corn soon rose all around to above yesterday's finish. Wheat opened at a shade lower to ⅛c advance and subsequently showed general gains. Oats inclined upward. Provisions were easier.

Signs that exporters were persistently after corn today did much at times to counteract predictions that Monday would witness largely increased arrivals of corn here. Chicago corn receipts today were liberal, 467 cars, and there also were good sized receipts at Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis. Clear skies and sub-zero temperatures likewise were on the side of lower prices. On the other hand detailed government reports showed that throughout the entire corn belt, barring Oklahoma and Texas, swine on farms exceed at present by nearly 4,000,000 head the number so held a year ago.

Announcement that 200,000 bushels of corn had been sold this morning to go into storage here did a good deal to bring about numerous reactions from upturns in corn prices. As against the bears, however, there also were notices that considerable corn in store here had been ordered out today for export shipment by way of Philadelphia.

WOMEN PUNCTUATE THROUGH THEIR HATS

Women have found a masterly way of answering masculine gibes at their weak punctuation. They are taking all the commas, semicolons, and other signs which they leave out of their letters and sticking them in their hats.

Weather Conditions.

The skies are clear over much the greater portion of the country this morning, due to widespread high pressure. The plateau high is still stationary, but an offshoot from it moved eastward to the Plains states and the Central valleys, producing a decided drop in temperature from the Central plains eastward to the Appalachian Mountains.

Freezing temperatures occurred as far South as Mobile, and the 10-degree line to Central Kentucky. North of the Ohio River the temperatures are close to zero. In the Northern Plains states and the Canadian Northwest the temperatures are above zero, except in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Manitoba.

Harry A. Wray, 300 E. North ave., N. S.

In Loving Memory of JAMES W. ORR, Arch St., N. S., Jan. 28, 1927.

He said good night
not goodby.
His busy hands are folded now,
His work on earth is done,
His heavenly crown is won;
He bid no one his last farewell;
He waved his hand to none;
His soul fled before we knew
That he from us had gone.

Sadly missed by his wife, son, L. G. Wesley, and daughter, Lorena G. Orr.

AN ORDINANCE vacating an unnamed way, in the 27th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from Ontario street to Doerr street.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, that an unnamed way, in the 27th Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, bounded on the west by lots Nos. 1 and 2 and on the east by lot No. 3, as laid out in the J. P. Smith Plan of Lots of record in the Recorder's Office of Allegheny county in Plan Book, Volume 2, page 181, from Ontario street to Doerr street, shall be and the same is hereby vacated.

SECTION 2. This ordinance, however, shall not take effect or be of any force or validity unless the American Nut and Bolt Fastener Company, the owner of the property abutting on an unnamed way, in the 27th Ward, from Ontario street to Doerr street, to be vacated, shall, within thirty (30) days after the passage of this ordinance, pay into the Treasury of the City of Pittsburgh the sum of Two Thousand Forty-six ($2,046.00) Dollars, for the use of the City of Pittsburgh.

SECTION 3. That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

In Denver, traffic officers merely take the license number of an offending motorist and notify him by postcard. The violator may then remit the stated fine by mail.

This saves a lot of wear and tear on a motorcycle cop's vocabulary.

SYNTHETIC

This is Grandpa Doakes, who will be in charge of the branch office of our Bigger and Better Poetry Department for 1928. Mr. Doakes' first move was to distribute dodgers in parked autos calling for contributions. "Very fascinating," was Mr. Doakes' only comment when asked how he liked his new work.

In the future, say the chemists,
So much hidden truth we'll win
That we'll make all things synthetic,
Just as well as bootleg gin,
There will be synthetic rubber
On the shiny new machines
And the motors will be burning
Cheap synthetic gasolines.
We will have synthetic blowouts
And we'll make synthetic stops
As we hear synthetic whistles
Blown by fat synthetic cops.
We'll transact synthetic business,
We will see synthetic shows,
Where we'll watch the nimble chorus
Go without synthetic clothes.
And of course at last we'll marry
Brides in white synthetic silk,
And we'll raise synthetic babies
On Grade A synthetic milk!

Friend tells of a sad case. Some young men were celebrating, when one of them accidentally slipped under a steam roller and was flattened.

"We carried him home," says one friend, "and were about to slip him under the front door when his mother called a policeman and had us arrested for attempting to steal her hall rug."

ON "THE ETERNAL MAGNET"

Sometimes a man DECEIVES a Woman. It HAS been done!
And sometimes the WOMAN makes A big fuss and REPROACHES him
With bitter words and ANGRY
Gestures. This, too,
Has been known to HAPPEN,
And when it DOES, one may be Sure that the WORLD will Hear about it. For an ANGRY or
Jealous woman has no sense
Of VALUES, and will ADVERTISE
The man's shortcomings, forgetting
That she is, at the same time,
BROADCASTING all her own.
Sometimes, when a man is Weak, and admits his WEAKNESS
To the woman who LOVES him,
She is COMPASSIONATE and
REFRAINS from blaming him.
Then, usually, ONE of two Things happens, He will either
Be ASHAMED, stay home and be GOOD, or be ashamed and
GO. And either way, the woman
SCORES. Should he STAY, however,
The world will never know
He FELL. And should he GO,
Other men will STRIVE to Take his place,
For a TENDER HEART is an Irresistible MAGNET.

BUGS BAER Says

Rather than allow the Democrats surpass them in modern improvements the Republicans have also developed a rift in the organization.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

It is strictly a New York State G. O. P. split but may grow into something worth voting about.

The two parties will now go into the early June primaries on even terms. Yesterday's speeches in Congress indicated that the national platforms will be in brackets.

Senator Bloke (Dem.), opened up the minority complaints with a few well chosen interruptions.

"We (the D.'s) have them (the wets) on the lamm. I do not care whether a man is wet or dry. The only necessary qualification is that he shall be able to read or write." (Prescriptions.)

Senator Moof (Rep.) then carried the banner down the aisle.

"I agree with my companionate opponent. The only man who could stay on my party (Republican) plank would be Blondin (a tight rope walker). There is plenty of corn in Kansas (but not for eating purposes) and I hope that the Democrats will nominate a man whom we can defeat on his merits."

A Summary of the feet on the desks indicated that the motion was carried by a plurality of rubber heels.

Senator Dubbulex (D.), got loose from his secretary and monopolized the Blue Network. (Radio.)

"There s no reason why we should nominate a president and vice president. (The ticket) It would raise the prestige of our party (D.'s) if we had one man defeated at a time."

"Senator Glink (temporary resident of a contested swivel chair) then pulled a bright thought out of another senator's waste basket.

"I (Glink) have been hearing too much about this man Whom. I know every family in my state and never heard of the Whoms. What good is a vice president. (Question.) If the president must have his pulse felt every day let it be by the White House physician."

"The budget (big Navy appropriation) didn't include my raccoon overcoat. I wish somebody would return it. Our last convention (D.) was in California. This year we will meet (argue) in Texas. It seems to me that we are getting too far away from the subject." (Washington).

Having indorsed the parenthesis and condemned the brackets, the filibusters called for an oral caucus, and the principal disability about the average senatorial day of tacking and luffing is that it requires only a two-third majority to make it official. And when the sun sinks in the Golden West it looks like the inflamed portal of a wasted day.

Pittsburgh Needs a New Airport Near Downtown

Pittsburgh's need of a centrally-located airport, to supplement the large landing fields that are located a considerable distance from the city, is apparent to everyone,

The discussion that has followed the proposal to utilize Schenley Oval as such an airport has been extremely valuable. It has compelled the public mind to concentrate on this supremely important problem.

It is a matter of regret that, apparently, legal barriers will prevent the use of any portion of Schenley Park as an airport site. Nevertheless, the discussion that followed this proposal has focused the public mind on all the available sites.

Probably one of the rugged hills that lie between the downtown section and the East End will finally be selected.

Pittsburgh needs an airport adjoining the downtown section, and the best thought of the community should be directed to finding the most available site.

Promise of Car Control Within Year Good News

Within a year Pittsburgh will have an automatic system of co-ordinated traffic control. That is assured by the decision of Council to tax its bonding power to the extent of $125,000 to cover the cost of installation. The estimated period required for the passage of bond and construction ordinances, letting of contract and completion of the work is 10 months.

This is good news to Pittsburgh, where it has been believed the irregular layout of streets in the downtown district presented an effective bar to any workable system aside from the one in use at present—direction of traffic by police. Experiments with lights have proven unsatisfactory, and we had long ago resigned ourselves to the belief that Pittsburgh could not hope to do as other cities have done, because of conditions peculiar to our city.

The unanimity with which Council decided the progressive system proposed was adaptable to Pittsburgh gives reason for strong hope that it will prove just what is wanted here. At any rate a thing so promising that it appeals to traffic experts and investigators, who recommended it after an extensive survey in other cities, is worth the severe test that Pittsburgh traffic will impose upon it.

Realities of Peace

The women's conference on causes and cure of war recommended that in the adoption of any naval building program "the President be authorized to suspend construction if circumstances warrant it."

Who is to be the judge of the circumstances? The Constitution vests in the Congress the power to declare war. Congress alone has the power to appropriate for preparedness.

Women will best conserve the chances of peace when they grasp fully the realities.

The Stone Age Still Lasts

Australian Snake Eaters.

A "STONE AGE" SAVAGE IN AUSTRALIA.

One of the most desolate and backward regions in the world is Arnhem Land, on the Gulf of Carpentaria, in Australia, named by Dutch explorers in 1618 and until now almost unknown to white men.

It has been explored by Mr. Francis Birtles, who, during years of painstaking investigation, covered 300,000 miles of unknown, strange territory.

In that land of swamps and strange animals live men practically in the Stone Age. The savage, whose picture you see here, holds in his hand a dagger made of stone. His other weapon is a Stone Age club, or native tomahawk, a stone fastened with the sinews of animals to a club.

His rank among the other savages, a rank which he values, of course, and thinks highly important, is shown by the number of plaited bamboo bands worn on his arms.

Savages that fight with daggers made of stone, eat any kind of animal they catch, fish, lizards and, as a great delicacy, snakes, which are killed, poison fangs removed and skinned.

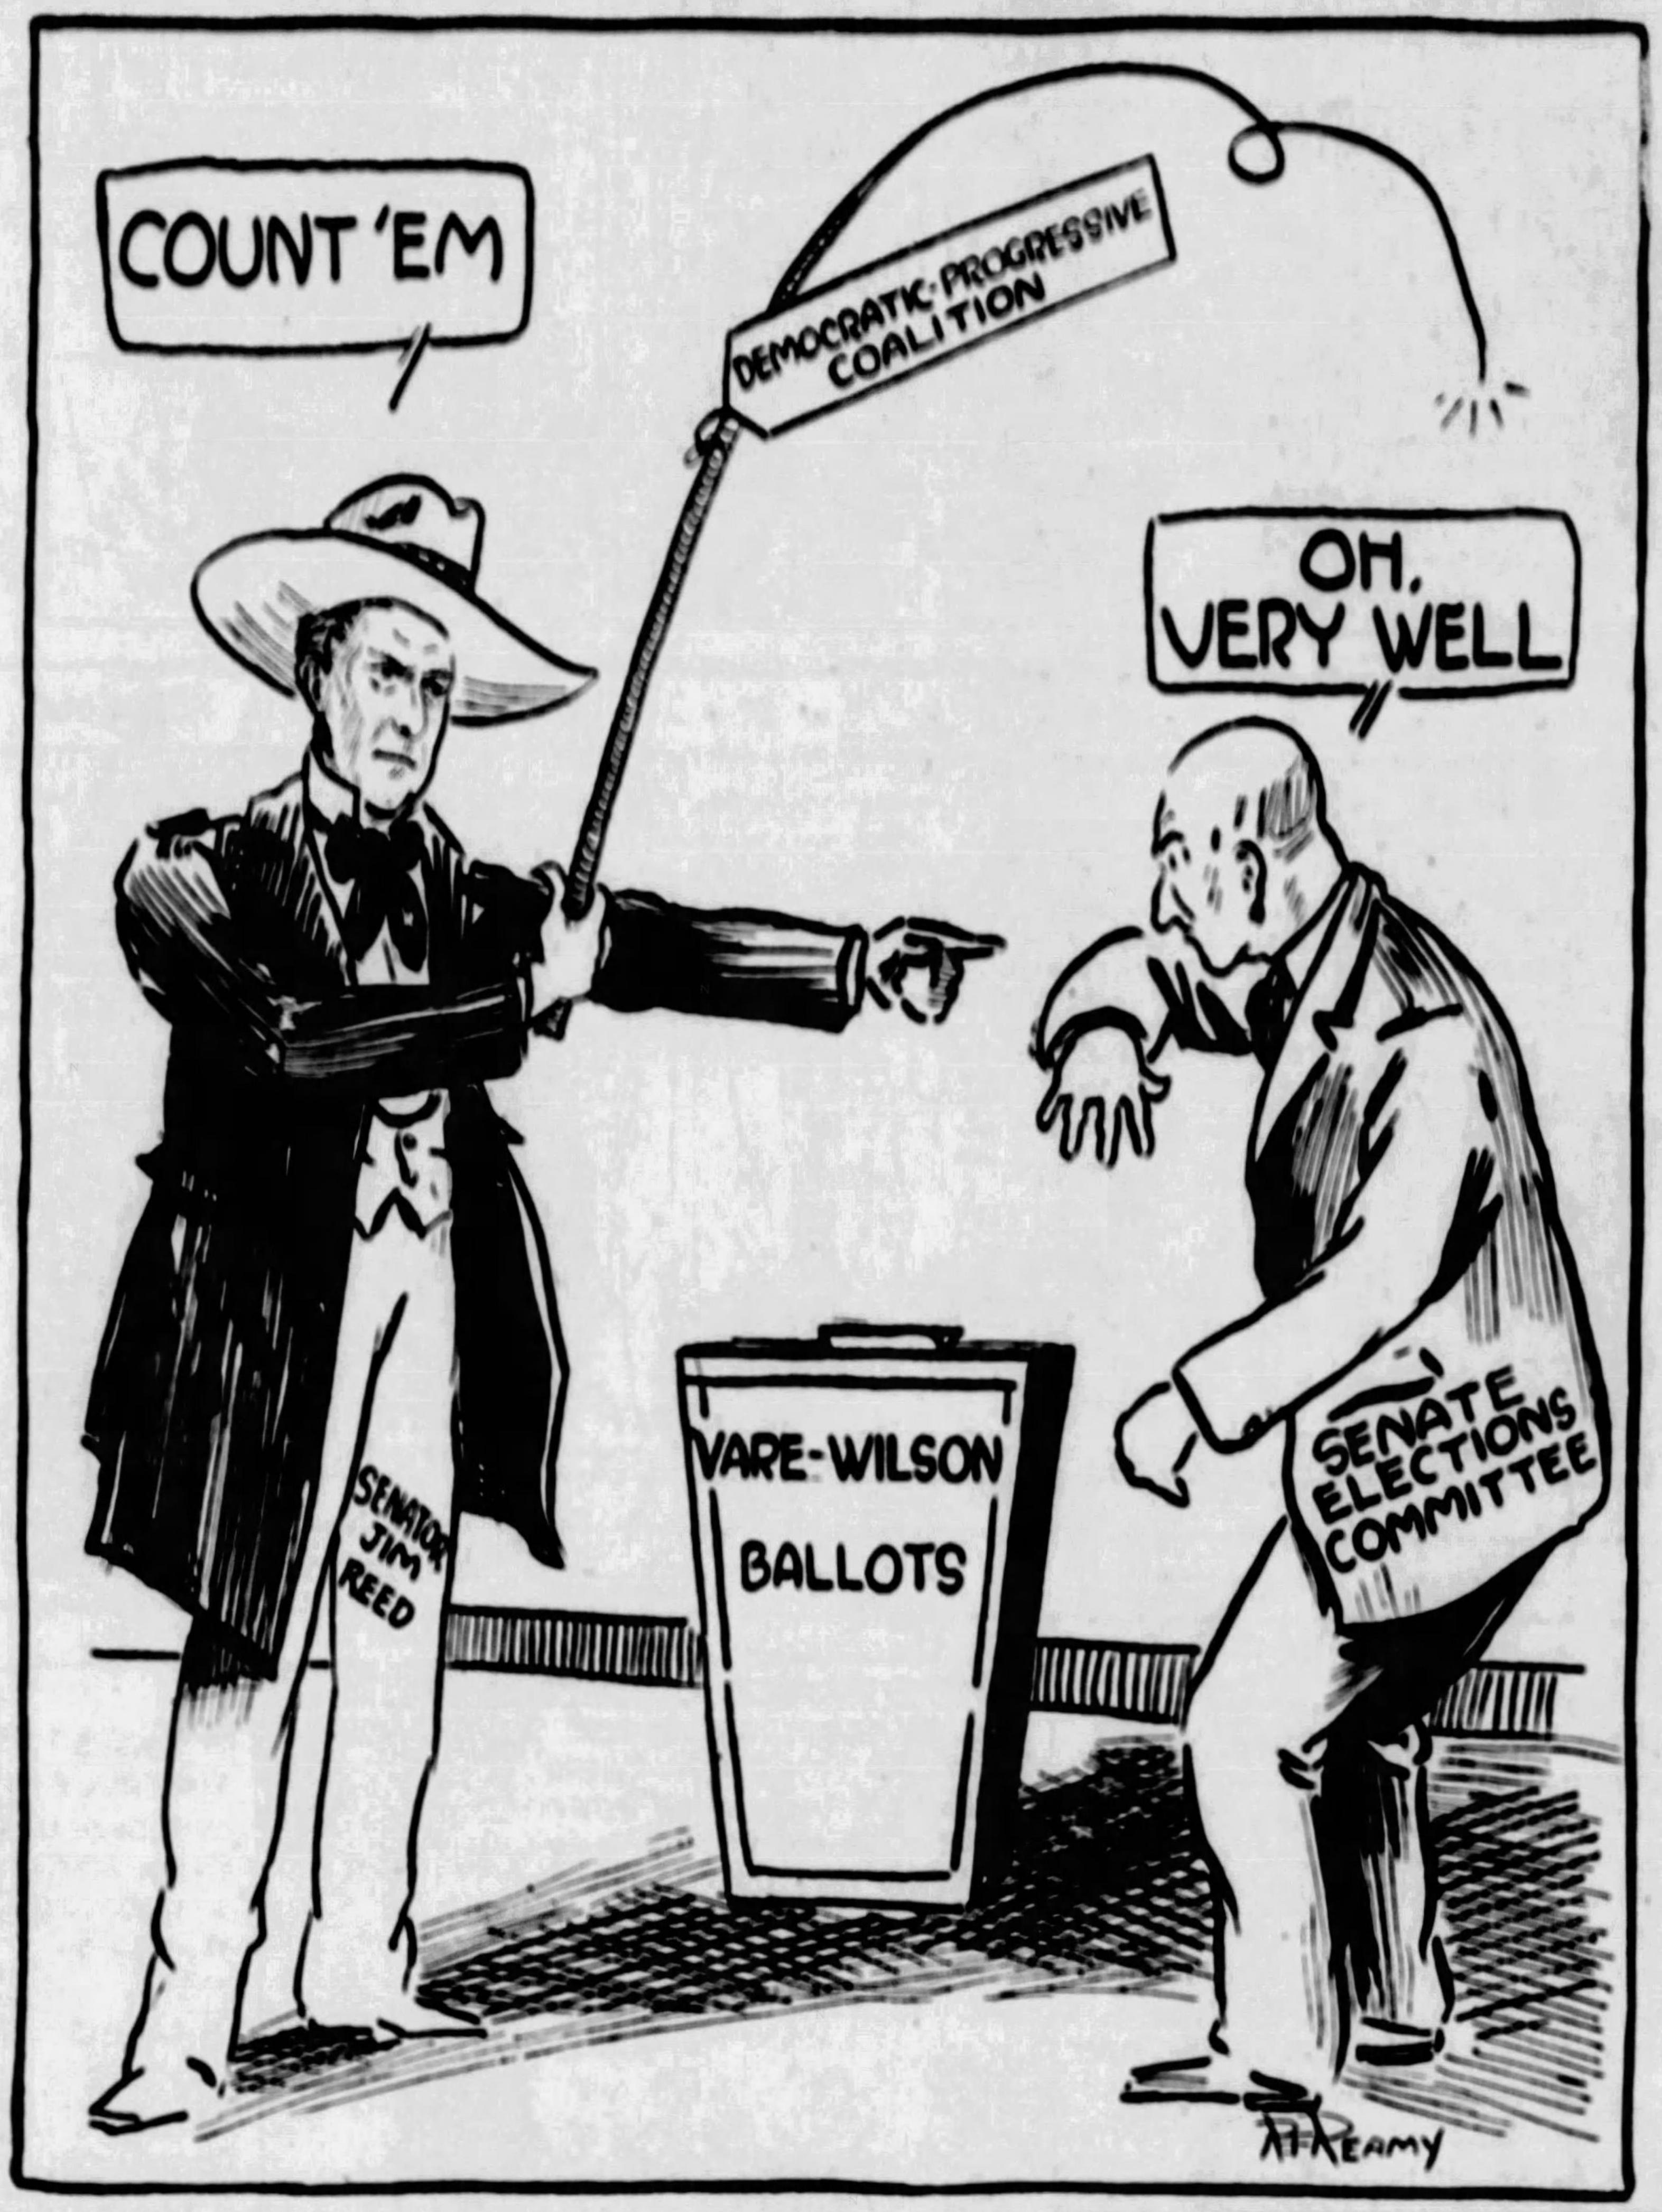
These strange "humans" and strange animal dwellers in the mysterious Australian swamp lands, remind us that if you boil down together all the 1,600,000,000 on earth, you would not find a very high AVERAGE.

There is horrible cruelty among millions, including 300,000,000 in India. Nothing LOWERS the average more than cruelty.

These "Stone Age" savages remind us that once no other kind of human beings lived on earth, no weapons but sharpened stone, no thought but to kill your neighbor before he killed you—eating him, of course, after you killed him.

Our average isn't HIGH, but there HAS been progress. Thank Providence for that.

NOW, MAYBE, WE'LL GET THE TRUTH



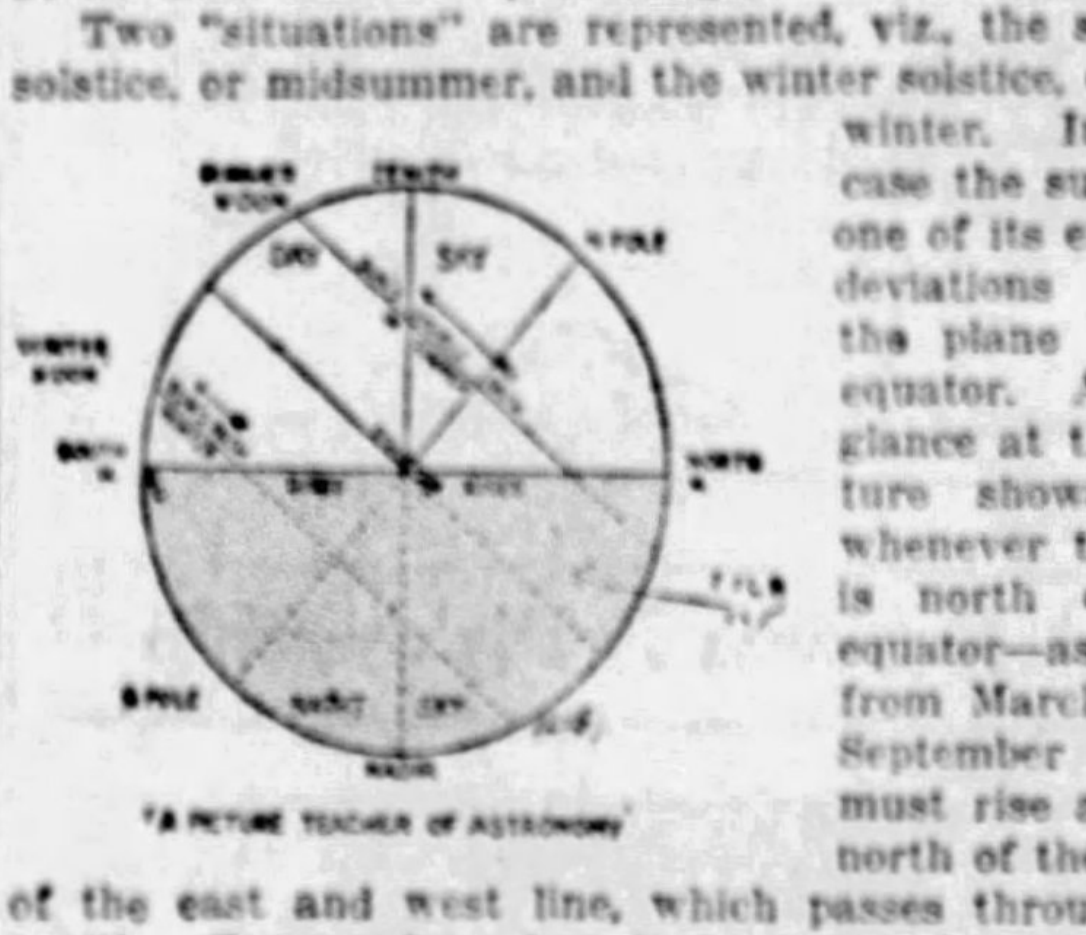
Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Wandering Sun

"Why does the sun rise and set north of east and west in summer, although at noon it is south of the east and west line?—Reader."

A CELESTIAL globe would show you why in a minute. But celestial globes, or globes of any kind, are not as numerous in people's houses as they should be, or will be, if we keep on educating ourselves.

Let us try what we can do with a picture on a flat surface. Suppose the circle represents a vertical section through the earth and the sky, cut on a north and south line, with the observer placed in the plane of the horizon, H—H, and looking straight "westward" through the picture. (The earth is assumed to be a mere point at the center of the picture.) The sunrise points are marked; the sunset points are assumed to be straight in line with them on the other side, where the sun's path through the day sky comes down again to meet the horizon. Otherwise stated, only the forenoon half of the sun's daily path is shown, the other half being assumed to pass down the opposite side. Of course, the terms "day sky" and "night sky" refer only to the view from the earth; from a point in open space there would be no difference of day and night.



"A PICTURE TEACHER OF ASTRONOMY"

Two "situations" are represented, viz., the summer solstice, or midsummer, and the winter solstice, or midwinter. In each case the sun is at one of its extreme deviations from the plane of the equator. A mere glance at the picture shows that whenever the sun is north of the equator—as it is from March 20 to September 22—it must rise and set north of the plane of the east and west line, which passes through the zenith. Conversely, when it is south of the equator (from September 22 to March 20), it must rise and set south of east and west.

But the picture also shows that, because the sun's daily motion (which is only an apparent motion due to the earth's rotation on its axis) takes place in a plane at right angles to the earth's axis, it must necessarily cross the meridian at noon at a point south of the zenith, i. e., south of the east and west line. This is a consequence of the inclination of the polar axis to the plane of the horizon. Moreover, as a little inspection will show you, the position of the sun with regard to the east and west line varies with the latitude of the observer on the earth. The greater the latitude, the higher the pole and the less the inclination of the sun's path to the horizon.

Imagine the North Pole in the picture tipped up higher and higher until it coincides with the present position of the zenith; then the sun at noon will be farther and farther south of the zenith, and when the pole reaches the zenith the sun will travel round and round the horizon, appearing in succession at every point of the compass in the course of 24 hours, and, if it is north of the equator, never setting.

On the other hand, imagine the pole more and more depressed, i. e., the latitude decreased, and you will see that when the pole sinks to the plane of the horizon the east and west line, i. e., the plane through the zenith, coincides with the equator, and the sun rises and sets vertically, appearing all day long north of the east and west line in summer (our summer), and all day long south of it in winter. There is a lot more of astronomy that you can learn for yourself by studying our picture, though better by studying a globe.

Rather Like It

THE elevator was unusually crowded, and when an inoffensive-looking man accidentally stepped upon another's toe he roused all the evil in the latter's soul.

"You clumsy idiot!" roared the injured one, and he bent down and massaged his foot. "Confound you, sir, you might have broken my instep!"

An abject apology from the offender failed to appease, however, and once again the loud voice rose.

"Do you think my feet were made for an idiot to walk on?" he demanded.

"It almost seems as if they were," was the quiet rejoinder.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Work's the Thing!

IT IS easy for you to pity yourself because you have to work; and even with work, life is such a struggle.

But perhaps it is because you must work constantly that you are a law-abiding citizen.

If you were not busy all the time would you not get into ways which might lead to a bad end?

What would you do to put in time if you had money enough to support you without any effort on your part?

Think of some of the things you believe you would do.

Would not many of them be of a discreditable nature?

And how bored you would be without occupation to interest you.

You would be looking for the things that would give you the most "kick."

And what are they?

Nothing beneficial or elevating, if you are like many idlers.

Perhaps the greatest blessing you have is your work.

Tales That Are Told

R-R-Revenge

INTO the sanctum of the editor of the "Spudville Screamer" burst the wreck of what had once been a reporter.

"Mr. Snips," observed the object, "that fellow you sent me to interview lost his temper!"

"Ah!" said the mighty one.

"And hit me in the eye!"

"Great Scot!" roared Snips.

"And knocked me down! Cleaned his carpets with me! Damaged the stairs against my head! And kicked me out of the place!"

"He did, did he, the shameless scoundrel!" cried the editor. "Well, get your own back—spell his name wrongly!"

Water Wanted

COOPER had been standing in the coal cellar nearly all the afternoon with his fingers glued firmly over a leak in the water main, out of which water still managed to force its way.

Suddenly he heard his wife's voice calling him.

"George," she cried, "you can take your hands off that leak now."

"Thank heaven!" replied her husband. "Has the plumber come at last?"

"No," was the answer; "but the house is on fire."

Muddled History

SOME of the boys were taking but little interest in the lesson, and the teacher grew desperate.

"William Smith," he demanded, suddenly, "are you listening?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Then perhaps you can tell me where Nelson was killed?"

"Trafalgar Square!" was the reply.

"Indeed!" ejaculated the teacher. "Then I suppose Wellington was killed at Waterloo Station?"

"No, sir," responded William; "that was Napoleon!"—London Tit-Bits.

HIS NAME is Dickie.
AND I think his age.
IS ABOUT two years.
AND EVERY day.
WHEN THE sun is warm.
AND I pass his house.
HE'S IN a corral.
HARD BY the walk.
AND NEARLY always.
HE'S DOING his best.
TO TEAR a hole.
THROUGH THE chicken wire.
OR THROUGH the cord.
THAT MARKS some spot.
WHERE SOMETIME in the past.
HE HAS succeeded.
IN GETTING out.
AND ONCE or twice.
I'VE found him stuck.
WITH ONE leg out.
AND I'VE helped him back.
AND HE'S pleaded with me.
IN BABY words.
THAT I can't understand.
TO BE a good fellow.
AND LIFT him out.
AND I'VE wanted to.
BUT I haven't dared.
AND ANYWAY.
I WAS ON my walk.
* * *
AND I found him there.
TUGGING AWAY.
AS HARD as he could.
AT A mass of cord.
THAT HAD blocked a hole.
HE HAD once made.
* * *
AND HIS face was red.
AND HIS eyes dripped tears.
AND HE was mad.
AND WHATEVER it was.
HE WAS trying to say.
* * *
I'M SURE it was swearing.
* * *
AND WHEN I stopped.
HE LOOKED up at me.
* * *
AND HE is a sweet kid.
AND THE tears in his eyes.
AND HIS trembling lips.
MADE SO great an appeal.
THAT I called to a boy.
WHO WAS playing close by.
AND SAID to him.
"IF THIS kid gets out.
"YOU LOOK AFTER HIM."
AND I knew the boy.
AND I knew he would.
AND I sneaked out my knife.
AND OPENED it.
AND REACHED down my hand.
AND DRAGGED the blade.
THROUGH some of the cords.
AND SAID to Dickie.
"KEEP PULLING at it."
AND HURRIED away.
AND WHEN I got back.
DICKIE was out.
AND HIS mother was there.
AND SHE said to me.
"I CAN'T understand.
"HOW DICKIE gets out."
BUT ANYWAY.
SHE LET him stay out.
AND PLAY with the boy.
AND THAT was that.
I THANK you.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The "Death Watch," or first night crowd at the New York theaters, has a stenciled sapience. The personnel varies little with the seasons. Chronic premiere patrons occupying the same seats express the same attitude of slight boredom.

As any critic knows, nothing is so deadly monotonous as a new theatrical offering every night, yet the first nighters rarely falter. Not even the fuss and fine feathers or the glitter of a new star offer much stimulation after the first month.

The professional first nighter seems to have entered an endurance contest akin to that of the flag-pole sitter. While many are allied with the theater, there are many more who represent callings in no wise connected therewith.

Otto Kahn, a banker, is almost certain to arrive in the middle of the first act, generally alone and wearing full evening dress. He may drop in at two openings a night. Then there is George Mayer, a retired business man, who sits in the second row with his white-haired mother. And Dr. Nathaniel Lief, a dentist.

Also Dr. Leo Michel, a surgeon. Frank Case, proprietor of the Algonquin, is seldom an absentee. Nor are Conde Nast, the publisher, or Garney Gallant, the cabaret impresario. Sailing Baruch may be relied upon to be far down front, as well as Caleb S. Bragg, a rich sportsman.

Then there are Jules Bruletour and his wife, Hope Hampton. And Clare Gould and his wife, the former Lorraine Manaville. Jules Glaenzer, the jeweler. A. Reuben, the delicatessen king. Irving Berlin and the former Ellin Mackey. To say nothing of the most popular first nighter of all—the Hon. Jimmy Walker and his pal, William Seeman.

In the theatrical division are such regulars as Lee Shubert, Max Hart, Brock Pemberton, Gene Buck, Sam H. Harris, Edgar Selwyn, David Burton and C. P. Greneker. So the first night audience is standardized and a little blase. They no longer even set up the cry of "Author."

Broadway's newest and most unique electric sign is one flashing 25 different reasons why you should use a certain patented article.

There is a sign in the making which will adorn the Columbus Circle neighborhood presenting a 15-minute pantomimic skit, heralding the virtues of a hair oil. White way building owners are said to collect more than $2,000,000 a year from roof-top sign rentals.

* * *

One of the costliest signs in the Times Square section proved a total loss. After it flashed for a few weeks it was completely hidden by a larger one.

There are a half dozen men known as "spotters" employed to roam the White Way after nightfall and report bulbs that fail to glow.

There is an ever recurring story that head porters in smart hotels receive no salary and in some cases pay for the privilege of holding the job. I am told by a hotel man they receive a living wage and some are able with tips to make $10,000 a year—but they are in the minority. Their incomes have been reputed to be as high as $50,000 a year.

The chief annoyance of New York is that no matter what interesting sight you are looking at there is always some moron back of you explaining it all wrong to someone.

Film and Vaudeville

By DR. FRANK CRANE

At last the authoritative head of the United Artists Corporation of film makers has spoken.

It is Joseph M. Schenk, who said the other day in a report made for the Film Daily Year Book that theater managers are making a mistake in having vaudeville in connection with their moving pictures.

He said that 5,000-seat theaters are injuring the moving picture business because it is necessary to pay so much for vaudeville that they cannot afford to pay for good pictures.

The result was a discouragement to those who would produce high-class films.

"They have not kept faith with the public," continued Mr. Schenck, "which build the theaters for motion pictures and as soon as they are forced to suspend dividends the stockholders will voice their sentiments."

This is in line with the sentiment expressed in this column some time ago in favor of moving pictures standing on their own bottom and claiming that the movie was sufficient entertainment without the addition of vaudeville.

For those who care for vaudeville there are the vaudeville houses which exist in almost every large city.

But the moving picture houses should be reserved for moving picture fans.

These could be operated at small expense and the pictures could run longer, thus making possible the using of better films.

When moving pictures were first introduced they were shown as addenda to a vaudeville program. Of late the tendency has swung back to this custom, and those who go to see the moving picture really are made to see a lot of vaudeville in connection therewith.

Of course if the public want vaudeville and theater managers find that it pays they should have it.

But those who are interested in the moving picture business as an art are anxious to see it placed squarely upon its own merits.

For this purpose it would doubtless be better, as Mr. Schenck suggests, to have smaller theaters, of not more than 2,000 seats each, which would make the production of better than mediocre films possible.

Right Angles

Two Serpent Stings

HOW well some of us remember when a certain prominent woman in English society was pilloried over the whole atlas by a poem of William Watson's, entitled, "The Woman With the Serpent Tongue."

The poem was a cross between T. N. T. and vitriol, and left the poor woman as morally nude as Venus. But it proved a boomerang, and came back upon his defenseless head as though hurled by an Australian bushman. Not that the facts were questioned, but the defendant was a woman.

So let that cayenne pepper tongue be my theme today, with a prologue to the effect that said hot speech organ is hermaphrodite. Both sexes are guilty. The only difference is that the man is an Iago and the woman a Xanthippe.

There are two stings of the serpent tongue which should be put in italics and underscored—that he who runs may read and he who reads may run.

One is the defamation of people respected by the present company and the other is the same castigation applied to things much appreciated by any or all. These two form the rattler's fangs and the inevitable result is poison and pain, if not death.

And the tongue that wags thus has the rude manners of a boor. Any etiquette authority from Sir Philip Sidney to Emily Post will tell you that true courtesy consists in holding in firm leash the unpleasantries, and liberating the words of general kindliness.

The expressions, "I hate that person," and "I hate that thing," mark one as too unsocial for agreeable company. Hubbard used to preach the sermon, "In a world where death is, there is no room for hate."

I once knew a young woman who was the last word in charm when it came to appearance and largeness of heart. But her tongue carried the two deadly stings and was as uncontrolled as the wild winds of Labrador. Consequently she walked a lonely path, unsought and unwooed, through the years of acceptability to the exile of solitary womanhood.

The censor may scratch this, but I set it down with a vigor that jabs through the paper and scratches the desk:

This two-fanged serpent tongue is the Devil's chief viceregent on earth and sends uncounted millions down an endless Via Dolorosa.

William Watson, recite!

Names that among the noblest are."

The Minuet

LITTLE maid of long ago,
Dancing stately measures,
Queens and thrones may come and go,
Yours the grace time treasures!

With what skill the artist wrought
Satin, pearls and laces,
See how cunningly he caught
Childhood's airy graces!

Little maid of long ago,
Did life's coil ensnare you?
Did the years, in time's swift flow,
Good and evil bear you?

Who can say? Your painted face,
Dainty and beguiling,
Mocks our doubts with childish grace
From the canvas smiling.
